Still critical

Nixon's vital signs stable

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon is still on the critical list, although he shows some improvement and his internal bleeding has apparently stopped, his doctor said today.

"His vital signs are stable," said Dr. John C. Lungren, adding that Nixon had some "interrupted sleep" during the night.

The former president is experiencing restlessness and occasional nausea, Lungren said.

He said anticoagulation therapy — which triggered the bleeding that sent Nixon into shock for three hours Tuesday after phlebitis surgery — had been discontinued and will not be begun again "until we feel safe that bleeding from surgery is not a danger."

Lungren said Nixon received three pints of blood during transfusions to counteract shock and internal bleeding.

"There were no significant bleeding problems encountered at the time of surgery," he said.

Lungren's remarks came in a three-page written statement read to newsmen by a hospital spokesman.

He attributed the internal bleeding to secondary reaction to anticoagulation drugs Nixon had been receiving to combat the threat of potentially fatal blood clots.

Lungren said he had been in contact with President Ford's physician, Dr. William Lukash, Tuesday night and this morning.

"He expressed President Ford's deep concern over Mr. Nixon's condition and asked me to convey to former President Nixon and Mrs. Nixon that his prayers are for his full and complete recovery.

"Dr. Lukash also requested that I keep in contact with him so he and President Ford may be apprised of any change in the former president's condition."

Nixon's wife, Pat, and daughters Tricia and Julie arrived at the hospital before Lungren's statement to be at Nixon's bedside.

Lungren said Nixon is receiving intravenous antibiotics and was under continuous intensive care.

"Specially trained critical care nurses are with him around the clock," Lungren said.

"All emergency resuscitation equipment for any contingency are at his bedside.

"He is being monitored as any patient in critical condition, and this includes continuous monitoring of heart activity and such tests as constant monitoring of blood volume determination."

Lungren said such a reaction frequently occurs after the type of internal bleeding which Nixon suffered.

The statement added, "At this time it would be premature to provide a prognosis" — prediction of Nixon's outcome.

Police officers testify

Prostitution arrests banned

By JACK SCHICHT
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

Four Sedalia police officers testified Wednesday morning they were told not to make prostitution arrests at either the residence of Charles "Chuck" Brown, or his Sportsman's Club No. 2.

The testimony came Wednesday morning at the second session of the public hearing on charges to remove suspended Police Chief William E. Miller from office. The hearing was expected to resume at 1:30 p.m. today.

Patrolman Levoy City said that two or three times he was told that prostitutes could be arrested on the streets, but police "weren't to bother them" at Sportsman's Club No. 2.

City said the orders were given by Lt. John McDonald, and not Miller. However, City said McDonald indicated this policy "was the way the chief wanted it."

Other police officers to testify were Tom Wasson, Ronald Yates and James Gaertner.

Wasson said that one night he was told at roll call to leave prostitutes alone if they were in "Chuck's place," but to make arrests if the girls were on the street.

Yates and Gaertner also testified they were told the same thing at a roll call meeting.

Yates said on one occasion McDonald said the chief had indicated to "leave the girls alone on that particular night. Prior to that we had been making quite a few arrests."

Another time, Yates continued, he and other officers were instructed "not to go in any houses and arrest any girls if they were not on the street."

Gaertner said he was told "something to the effect 'Chief says leave Chuck's girls alone.'"

Robert Wesner, Miller's attorney, asked each of the policemen if they were told not to make arrests in houses without warrants because the arrests would not be effective.

Miller was suspended by Sedalia Mayor Jerry Jones on Oct. 9 based on 10 charges, one of which was that in June, 1972, and several times thereafter he ordered subordinate officers not to arrest prostitutes inside the Sportman's Club No. 2.

Another charge was that Miller "by inference and innuendo" threatened officers with retaliation if they cooperated in the investigation of the department. The investigation began last May and was carried out primarily by City Attorney Robert Liston and Mayor Jerry Jones.

Gaertner said that he had three meetings with Miller in the early stages of the investigation. At one of the meetings, he said, Miller questioned him about a "hard core nucleus of dissent within the department," or a "plot to get him."

Gaertner said he told the chief he didn't understand what he meant. Miller replied ... "certain officers with their necks stretched out are going to get them chopped off," Gaertner said, and added, "I'm not accusing or threatening you, but a word to the wise is sufficient."

"Before this investigation is over," Gaertner quoted Miller as saying, "a lot of people are going to be hurt, and I sure wouldn't like to see you get hurt."

Yates testified he also spoke to the chief about the alleged dissenters within the department.

The chief, he said, told him that the police personnel board in the near future might be creating the rank of corporal. Yates also said Miller told him he would hate to have to mention that Yates was causing "discontent or immorale among other officers."

Kissinger may visit Mideast

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today that the door to negotiations between Israel and the Arabs still appears to be open and he will probably visit the Middle East late next week to assess the prospects.

"That decision will be made in the next 72 hours," Kissinger told newsmen as he flew from India to Bangladesh.

Kissinger's spokesman, Robert Anderson, issued a statement saying that the Arab summit conference which ended in Rabat Tuesday has not changed the American position that "step-by-step negotiations, including between Jordan and Israel on the West Bank, offered the greatest hope of succeeding at the present time."

The Arab summit called for the creation of an independent Palestinian state on the West Bank of the Jordan River with the guerrilla leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization heading the government.

Israeli Information Minister Aharon Yariv said his government would not hand over the territory to the guerrillas.

A senior American official said Kissinger still has hopes of salvaging the step-by-step approach, but he described the situation as "a minefield."

The official also said Kissinger has no plans to meet with Yasir Arafat, the head of the PLO. If Kissinger goes to the Middle East, he will visit Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Syria and probably Saudi Arabia, the official added.

Kissinger came to hungry Bangladesh after promising India upward of a million tons of American food grains in the next year.

Authoritative Indian sources said Kissinger told Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government Tuesday that payment for the wheat, rice and other grain would have to be in dollars. But he said payment could be spread over 40 years and only 2 per cent interest would be charged.

More appeals for American food awaited him in Bangladesh, where the threat of famine is even more acute than in India.

Indian officials appeared well pleased with Kissinger's three-day visit to continue the work of undoing the damage done by the Nixon administration's pro-Pakistani stance in the 1971 India-Pakistan war that freed Bangladesh.

A senior Indian Foreign Ministry official told newsmen there was "nothing but complete understanding" between the two governments.

The official said Kissinger assured Mrs. Gandhi and Foreign Minister Y.B. Chavan that the U.S. government would not resume shipment of arms to Pakistan and would maintain the embargo imposed against both Pakistan and India during their 1965 war. The embargo has been lifted only once, for shipments to Pakistan in 1970.

Indian officials said Kissinger also informed them his government no longer views Pakistan as a counterweight to India in the subcontinent.

Kissinger seemed to soft-pedal the U.S. drive to get India, which exploded its first atomic bomb in May, to sign the treaty prohibiting the spread of nuclear weapons.

Offer to accept blame rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Nixon campaign aide Jeb Stuart Magruder told the Watergate cover-up trial today that he volunteered to take the blame for the break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters but that the idea was rejected by White House aides.

Magruder, former deputy director of Richard M. Nixon's re-election committee, said that one week after the June 17, 1972, break-in he met with former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and offered to go to the U.S. attorney's office and say he had authorized the political intelligence plan that led to the burglary.

Asked about Mitchell's reaction, Magruder said, "He didn't accept it or reject it. He said he would discuss it at the White House."

He said Mitchell told him later "they had discussed it at the White House and had rejected it because I was too close to Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Haldeman."

Mitchell and H.R. Haldeman, former White House staff chief, are two of the five defendants charged with conspiring to thwart the investigation.

The other defendants are former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman; former Asst. Atty. Gen. Robert C. Mardian, and Kenneth W. Parkinson, one-time attorney for the Nixon reelection committee.

Magruder, the third prosecution witness, described how Mitchell and other high-level officials first learned of the aborted break-in and said steps were taken quickly to destroy potentially incriminating files and to devise a credible explanation for the money used for political intelligence.

Magruder quoted Mitchell as telling him at a meeting on June 19, 1972, that "I should have a fire in my fireplace" to take care of wiretap information on the Democrats.

"Did you, in fact, have a fire in your fireplace that evening," asked assistant special prosecutor Jill Wine Volner.

"Yes, I did," Magruder replied.

"The next morning I told Mr. Mitchell I had destroyed the Gemstone file," Magruder added.

Then he told how it was decided to explain the $250,000 budget for political intelligence gathering.

He said Herbert L. Porter, another campaign committee official, agreed to tell officials that $100,000 was used for protection for surrogates making campaign appearances in Nixon's behalf.

Magruder said he told authorities that the remaining $150,000 was spent for a convention security plan.

Earlier, Magruder had testified that Mitchell approved the intelligence plan, saying, "let's give them the $250,000 and see what they come up with."

Magruder said that before approving the plan, Mitchell twice rejected proposals from G. Gordon Liddy that called for break-ins, wiretapping, kidnaping of demonstration leaders and using prostitutes to compromise Democrats.

He described Mitchell's reaction to Liddy's initial $1 million proposal as "very negative."

Liddy came back with a $500,000 plan and, once again, Mitchell rejected it.

But, according to Magruder, Mitchell approved the plan after it was scaled down to $250,000.

Democratic headquarters in the Watergate office building were entered on Memorial Day weekend 1972. Documents were photographed and bugs planted on telephones.

A few days later, Magruder said, "I received two packages from Mr. Liddy ... Each package contained synopses of tele-

Ford 'open-minded' on economic alternatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is inviting Congress to modify or refine his anti-recession, anti-inflation program "if better alternatives develop."

Appearing at a noisy Republican rally in a Calvin College fieldhouse in his home town of Grand Rapids, Mich., Tuesday night, Ford repeated a statement he made at a White House news conference earlier in the day:

"If, while Congress deliberates, economic circumstances change, I will be open-minded."

Ford urged, however, that his own proposals be given a chance.

The President made three speeches during his brief sentimental journey to Grand Rapids. At a downtown plaza, he stood bareheaded and without a topcoat in a chill, driving rain for more than a half-hour.

Ford was notified of former President Richard M. Nixon's medical setback while in Grand Rapids and said through a spokesman that he was praying for Nixon's full recovery. White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford had no plans to visit the critically ill Nixon, although he would be in Los Angeles Thursday for another political rally.

If anything, the President's campaign rhetoric on his home soil was a bit less strident than in appearances last week on behalf of Republican candidates.

Ford did not, for example, equate a big Democratic election victory Nov. 5 with a threat to world peace. As he earlier told his first impromptu news conference, held in the White House press center, "I was referring as much to Republicans as I was to Democrats who don't cooperate in giving a president of the United States an opportunity to meet the day-to-day problems that are involved in foreign policy."

Ford's Grand Rapids speeches continued to focus, however, on his argument that Democrats are big spenders who would jeopardize the fight against inflation and who, if they achieve a "veto-proof Congress," would preside over a legislative dictatorship.

Ford visited Grand Rapids to campaign for Republican candidate Paul Goebel Jr. He is trying to unseat Democratic Rep. Richard VanderVeen, who won Ford's old House seat on the strength of a Watergate backlash in a special election last year.

Later Ford mingled with several hundred Michigan Republicans who had paid $100 each to join him at a cocktail reception.

Speaking off the cuff, he said he was confident that there will be an easing of tensions in the Middle East and Cyprus, declared he was "looking forward to my trip to Vladivostok" for meetings next month with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, and anticipated "very successful" November visits to Japan and South Korea.

Arab summit results in oil money pledge

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — The Arab summit conference has ended with a pledge of more than $2 billion a year in oil money to Israel's enemy neighbors: Egypt, Syria, Jordan and the guerrillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The four-day conference's other major action was the recognition of the PLO as the government of a future independent Palestinian state on the West Bank of the Jordan River, occupied by Israel since the 1967 war.

The decision was another big boost in prestige for the PLO and its chief, Yasir Arafat. But Israeli Information Minister Aharon Yariv said the Jewish state would not hand over the territory to the guerrillas.

Conference sources said Egypt and Syria will each get $1 billion a year of the "confrontation" funds for the next four years; Jordan will get $300 million, and the PLO was allotted $50 million.

In addition, a single payment of $150 million will be made to South Yemen for a 99-year lease on its Perim island, commanding the Bab al Mandab strait at the southern end of the Red Sea. All shipping to and from Elat, Israel's southern port, must pass through the strait, and Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi are reported stationing naval forces there.

Conference sources said Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates would be the chief contributors. It was the first time the Arab oil countries agreed on concerted financial support for the campaign against Israel.

Israel's refusal to agree to a future PLO government on the West Bank appeared to freeze the Israeli occupation of the former Jordanian territory indefinitely and to promise future intensification of the Arab guerrilla campaign against Israel.

But he conference left Presidents Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Hafez Assad of Syria free to continue bilateral peace negotiations with Israel using Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger as their intermediary.

Weather aids state farmers in harvesting

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—Missouri farmers, blessed last week by warmer and drier October weather than usual, averaged five suitable days for field work, allowing strong advances in harvesting.

The Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said the corn harvest last Saturday was 53 per cent complete, compared with 31 per cent for thhe similar period a year ago.

Soybeans were 45 per cent harvested, six percentage points below last year.

Forty-six per cent of the grain sorghum and 43 per cent of the cotton were harvested. This was slightly behind grain sorghum and cotton harvests in 1973.

The fall seeding was two-thirds complete and pastures remained in fair to good condition with soil moisture adequate in most of Missouri.

Bright outlook for United Way

Despite cloudy economic conditions, things look bright for the United Way campaign in Sedalia. United Way director Mrs. Dolores Gerlecz estimates $30,000 has been collected so far in the campaign, which officially ends Nov. 15.

Sedalia United Way President Tom McCully admits "we're in a very difficult year," but he says the packets are coming in good order.

"Business and industry are holding and we are at a point where we were last year," McCully said. "All things considered, we are looking fine. With some breaks we are going to make it."

The United Way goal is $99,460 this year.

Russ Woodyard, campaign director, said there have been increases in some industrial contributions. He said the Zephyr Manufacturing Co. contribution is up about 33 and one-third per cent over last year.

Mrs. Gerlecz reported Tullis-Hall Dairy's contribution is up 54 per cent. McCully said the Missouri-Pacific Railroad has been facing some problems, "but has managed to hold the contributions up."

Ivan Stewart, chairman of the industrial division, said last year Klassic Co. gave $548 and Home Building Corp. gave $1,068.

This year both companies were closed and the lack of their contributions "will hurt," Stewart said. But, he said he is hopeful other increases will offset the loss.

Stewart said Permaneer is still going to donate "a substantial amount." He said it alone won't offset the money lost from Klassic and Home Building Corp.

Bill McCart, plant administrator of Permaneer, said "we feel we can come through with a good amount." He said the money would come from the Sedalia division of the company, but not from the remaining employes.

Stewart said this would have been the first year for the Permaneer employes to give to the United Way. He estimated between $800 and $1,000 could have been collected from the employes.

McCully said industrial contributions are the key to the success of the campaign. He said the residential contributions are also coming in strong this year.

"People are giving despite the economy," McCully said. "And every dollar is of tremendous importance."

Ann Landers

Looks and health improved by dentures

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you told a woman who was fearful of having all her teeth extracted (she was afraid dentures would interfere with her love life) to "seek another opinion." May I submit that opinion?

Dear Lady with the Rotten Teeth: I got my first partial plate at the age of sixteen. Most of my uppers had to be removed. The thought of it distressed me, but before long that partial plate changed my life. For the first time in years I smiled and laughed publicly without putting my hand to my mouth to conceal my crooked, decayed teeth.

At 21, I had a complete denture made and it was great. When a fellow I like a lot said, "Pucker up," I did — without fear that my dentures would slip. I am now happily married to a wonderful guy, but I kissed several sweeties before I made the final selection. My dentures never gave my a moment's trouble.

I want to tell the world that we've come a long way since George Washington and his wooden choppers. Today a good dentist can fit you with beautiful, natural-looking teeth that will allow you to eat everything — plus you'll look 100 per cent better and you'll be 200 per cent healthier. — A Witness

Dear Wit: Thank you for a letter a great many concerned readers will be able to sink their teeth into. In fact, they'll eat it up.

Dear Ann Landers: I violently disagree with your advice to "No Baloney." I, too, have wretched, miserable parents and I decided to cut them out of my life and have nothing to do with them. It was a good decision.

Why cater to people you intensely dislike and whose presence is distressing? Every man and woman who produce children are NOT parents. I disagree that children owe parents anything. You don't owe one damn thing to people who make your life hell. I have two children of my own and I am not a nut. Unlike my neurotic mother, I have wonderful friends. I function well in the community and deal successfully with my neighbors, associates and my children.

So my advice to "No Baloney" is, "Right on! Get away from those corrosive people. Move 2,000 miles from them. Build your own world of relationships as you want them. A lot of people will not understand what I am saying, but I understand. — Walked In Your Moccasins

Dear Walked: Too bad you and "Baloney" can't get together and swap stories about your "lousy" parents. You kids would have a ball.

Go ahead and beat your gums from now till doomsday about how "well-adjusted" and "content you are, but you know deep in your guts that you have failed to deal successfully with a very important problem — so you ran away from it. Running away may have been YOUR "solution," but the problem remains and my hunch is you haven't seen the last of it.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I spent the weekend with my mother-in-law. We left in a rush and I unintentionally took a towel and washcloth that belonged to her. They were almost identical to mine.

This morning I received a very cool letter asking that I return her towel and washcloth. She expressed "surprise" that I would do such a thing. I am sick at heart. Should I tell my husband? — Shocked

Dear S.: Yes. Then phone your mother-in-law in his presence, explain the confusion and send her two towels and two washclothes — her own and your nearly identical ones.

DEATH NOTICES

Mrs. Bertha Moon

FORTUNA — Funeral services for Mrs. Bertha Moon, 82, who died Tuesday, will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at the Conn Funeral Chapel in Tipton with the Rev. George Igo officiating.

Burial will be in the Mt. Carmel Cemetery, south of Syracuse.

Arraignment held for Sedalia men

Four Sedalia men were arraigned in Pettis County Magistrate Court Wednesday morning on charges of stealing property having a value in excess of $50. The four were charged in separate complaints but on the same incident.

The four are: Arthur W. Seabury, 17, 416 West Henry; Terrance Wilson, 17, 403 West Saline; Terry G. Buckner, 20, 802 North Osage; and Thomas Bently, 321 West Saline.

They allegedly took an eight track car stereo tape player and tapes Sunday night from a car owned by Larry Lindecrantz, 201 South Lamine.

They were arrested by Sedalia police Tuesday afternoon and turned over to the sheriff's department Wednesday morning.

The preliminary hearing for the four is scheduled for 10 a.m. Nov. 19. They are in the Pettis County jail in lieu of $2,500 bond.

phone conversations at Democratic National Committee headquarters and photographs of documents."

He took them home and read them "and I realized they were of little value."

Liddy was summoned to Mitchell's office, said Magruder, and the material was shown to the former attorney general.

Mitchell was "dissatisfied with the product Liddy was producing from wiretaps and photographs," Magruder said.

He quoted Liddy as explaining "with some embarrassment, that one of the bugs was not working and one was on the wrong phone."

He said Liddy promised "to correct the problem."

Was the problem corrected?

"We learned on the morning of June 17, that Liddy had not corrected the problem, but created a problem," replied Magruder.

That was the morning that five men were arrested inside Democratic party headquarters.

Before Magruder testified, the trial heard E. Howard Hunt Jr., one of the men convicted of conspiring to commit the Watergate burglary, assert that his demands for money in March 1973 were not meant as blackmail but as requests for what he felt was due to him.

Hunt had demanded $132,000 for legal fees and living expenses in a message sent in March 1973 to then-White House counsel John W. Dean III.

Hunt described the demand as "being as forceful as I could in an attempt to collect long overdue bills."

During two days on the witness stand, Hunt admitted repeatedly lying to a grand jury.

Asked for his motive, the former CIA agent and author of 50 books, nearly all of them spy novels, said, "I felt that by protecting others who were still in positions of power I could hopefully affect the length of my sentence."

It didn't work, and after reading the transcripts of the White House tapes in which then-President Nixon described the Watergate break-in defendants as "idiots" and "jackasses," Hunt said he decided to tell the truth.

Grocery store picketing at second chain

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Pickets from the Teamsters Union have spread to a second chain of grocery stores in the Kansas City area but the union settled its contract dispute with a third grocery chain today.

Pickets appeared at Safeway stores today, but store officials said all stores would remain open.

A strike by Teamsters Local 955, which has rejected new contract offers, closed 27 of the 40 Milgram stores in the Kansas City area Tuesday morning but all except seven of the stores were open by Tuesday afternoon.

An official for Milgram, which has started advertising for temporary help, said more of the chain's regular employes showed up for work Tuesday than had been anticipated, although members of some unions did not cross the picket lines.

The Teamsters had approved strikes against Milgram, Safeway, Associated Wholesale Grocers, Inc. and Fleming Foods Co. but an agreement was reached today with Associated, which distributes food to more than 500 stores in the Kansas City area.

Louis Fox, president of Associated Grocers, said Teamster Union members started returning to the job immediately after the approval of a two-year contract calling for wage increases of 14 per cent, or about 80 cents an hour, the first year and 10 per cent, or 57.5 cents, the second year. The union rejected a Milgram contract calling for a pay increase of 15 per cent this year and 9 per cent next year.

A union official said the new contract with Associated was approved by a margin of about 300-80. Fox said the contract did not represent a change in the original offer, but a union official said it did clear up some differences over contract language.

Fox said he expects the agreement to set a trend for the negotiations with other food chains.

Change of venue is sought in assault case

Sedalia attorney Craig Cassing has filed a motion seeking more time to file for a change of venue in Circuit Court on behalf of his client, Walter C. Prohaska, 33, Detroit.

Prohaska is charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm to Kenneth Swinford during the Ozark Music Festival. Prohaska's trail is set for Nov. 6 and 7.

Cassing maintains his client cannot get a fair trial in Pettis County or any county bordering it because of alleged prejudicial news coverage of the Ozark Music Festival.

In requesting the extended time, Cassing said Prohaska did not know of the prejudice and the "geographic distance between defendant and attorney" hinders the defense.

Cassing also filed a change of judge motion, saying Circuit Judge Frank Meyer was biased in the case.

Prohaska allegedly asaulted Swinford with the hook of his artificial arm when Swinford refused to pay Prohaska $3 after entering through a hole in the fence around the fairgrounds during the festival. Swinford charges he was hit in the face by the hook.

Proshaska is free on $7,500 bond.

Burglary charge is dismissed against young Sedalia man

Felony charges of second degree burglary and stealing were dismissed in Magistrate Court Wednesday against Stephen T. Baker, 19, 2222 West Second Street Terrace, for lack of evidence.

Baker and a juvenile were arrested Oct. 16 for the alleged burglary of the Ollie Lewis residence, 1805 West Fifth, on that date. The juvenile was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Sedalia police took a statement from Baker, which was presented as evidence. In the statement, Baker said he and another person entered a house, but he did not know where the house was. He further states the other person gave him a 50-cent piece after leaving the house.

In dismissing the case Magistrate Court Judge Hazel Palmer said the state failed to prove the Lewis house was broken into by Baker. She also said there was no evidence to show the money found on Baker belonged to Lewis.

Baker and his brother, Michael R. Baker, 22, of the same address, are currently free on $3,500 bond and awaiting trial in Circuit Court on another charge of second degree burglary and stealing.

That incident occured on Sept. 18 and involved a break-in at the home of William Pittman, Route 5.

Place embargo on all mail to France

The Sedalia Post Office announced Wednesday that, as of Tuesday, a total embargo was in effect for all surface and air mail to France.

A spokesman for the local office said the embargo was put in force because of a strike in France. All surface mail will be held by the Postal Service, while air mail will be returned to the sender.

A refund will be given on return postage after completion of a form required by the Postal Service, it was reported. It was not known how long the embargo would last.

Complaint on school book is rejected

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — A special review committee has rejected a complaint that a book designed to discourage youngsters from using drugs is too lewd for school libraries.

Dr. Robert Black, superintendent of the Liberty School District, concurred in the decision. Mrs. Shirley Doores, who is the mother of four teen-agers, has the right to appeal it to the school board.

The book is "Go Ask Alice," which has sold more than two million copies, is recommended by several educational association and is on the shelves of most junior and senior high school libraries.

One member of the review committee attached to its report a written statement which criticized Mrs. Doores for whipping up such a furor about the book.

If it were an obscene book that had slipped through the district's screening, the statment said, the established procedure of filing a complaint would have removed it quickly and quietly.

Dr. Black refused to identify the author of the statement but said he concurred in it.

The review committee found the diary of a 15-year-old girl who becomes entrapped by drugs into a fatal overdose is indeed a deterrent to drug use and facilitates a state-required program against drugs.

Mrs. Doores objected to its explicit passages involving sexual debauchery. The committee acknowledged they are potentially offensive to some but are appropriate to the context of the book.

Attorneys ask Calley be released

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — After waiting a month for the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to reach a decison, attorneys for William L. Calley Jr. asked that the former Army lieutenant be freed from jail.

They also filed similar motions with the U.S. Supreme Court in Washington Tuesday.

There was no immediate response from either court.

Last September, U.S. Dist. Judge J. Robert Elliott of Columbus, Ga., overturned Calley's conviction of murdering 22 South Vietnamese civilians at My Lai.

The Army quickly appealed the decision and requested an order to keep Calley locked up, a motion which 5th Circuit Chief Judge John R. Brown quickly granted.

Calley has been imprisoned at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., ever since.

Calley's attorneys noted that it is normal practice to release a prisoner whose conviction has been overturned while the appeal is being considered. If the judgment is reversed, he is then re-imprisoned.

"In spite of the presumption he is entitled to release, he has not been released even though the Army has conceded that he is not a danger to society or anyone," said the attorneys.

"To refuse his release pending appeal can only have a deleterious effect on public confidence in the administration of justice in our American system."

Effects on wildlife discussed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—No studies by the Missouri Conservation Department have been made on the effect of low-level radiation on wildlife in the area of the Union Electric Co.'s proposed nuclear power plant, the Missouri Public Service Commission was told today.

But George Dellinger, superintendent of the Conservation Department's land management section, said the department studied the utility's environmental statement to make sure that it met requirements.

Dellinger opened the third day of hearings on the company's application to build the $1.6 billion plant near the Missouri River in Callaway County.

"The conclusion was that various aspects had been treated very well," Dellinger said. "It is our own judgment that if the plant truely operates as stated in the environmental report, it would not have an adverse effect on wildlife."

Dellinger said the department has agreed to manage residual areas of the 6,600-acre site of the 2.3 million kilowatt generating plant, if both the PSC and the federal Atomic Energy Commission approve its construction.

Although a land management agrreement has not been officially signed, he pointed out that it is normal for the Conservation Department to undertake such management, and has done so on other utility owned lands. The actual management proposal, in accordance with federal guidelines, will be ready by next February, he said.

Dellinger said the department is concerned about the possible effects of low-level radiation, which is emitted from nuclear plants normally, on fish and game.

"But at this point in time, that's beyond the level of our expertise," he said. "Yes, we are concerned about it, but we rely on the expertise of other regulatory agencies."

He said the department has assumed that if the plant were built, it would meet the radiation safety requirements of the federal government.

Inflationary pressures increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — Productivity dropped sharply in the third quarter while labor costs continued to soar, further adding to inflationary pressures, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said productivity in the July-September period declined at a 3 per cent seasonally adjusted annual rate, reflecting a 3.3 per cent drop in output and a three-tenths of one per cent decline in man-hours.

Productivity — that is, output per man-hour — has now dropped in five of the last seven quarters. It fell 7.1 per cent in the first quarter of the year and edged up six-tenths of a per cent in the second quarter.

The government said the third-quarter decline in output reflected a larger decline than in man-hours, resulting from a shortening of the average workweek which was down 1.1 per cent.

Compensation per man-hour, which reflects wage costs as well as employer contributions to Social Security and other fringe benefits, rose 10.5 per cent during the third quarter. This compared with a rise of 14.2 per cent in the previous quarter.

The government said the increased compensation, combined with the drop in output per man-hour, resulted in a 13.9 per cent jump in unit labor costs.

Rising labor costs put pressure on employers to raise prices to keep profits high, thus fueling inflation.

Nixon

joined with Lungren in releasing the medical statement. The doctors declined to meet personally with newsmen.

Tuesday night Lungren said a team of physicians administered "countershock measures for three hours until a stable vascular circulation condition was once again restored."

Hickman spent the entire night near the 61-year-old former president.

Mrs. Nixon was later joined by Nixon's longtime personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods, and the two Nixon daughters, Tricia Nixon Cox and Julie Nixon Eisenhower, who flew in from the East Coast.

Mrs. Nixon and her two daughters remained with the former president until late Tuesday night and then went to the Nixons' seaside villa at San Clemente, 50 miles south of Long Beach, so the former president could have "undisturbed rest," said a Nixon aide.

A White House spokesman sent word that President Ford was praying for Nixon.

Lungren said Nixon's pulse rate had increased and he had a slight fever. He said Nixon was receiving medication intravenously.

Twelve hours earlier, surgeons had attached a plastic clip — resembling a clothespin with teeth — to a vein in Nixon's groin to control a newly discovered blood clot resulting from the phlebitis in his left leg. The jaw-like clip allows blood to flow, but impedes the movement of life-threatening clots to the heart and lungs.

In Memphis, Tenn., Dr. Robert M. Miles, inventor of the surgical clip used in Nixon's operation, said that post-operative hemorrhage is infrequent and patient shock is rare in that type of surgery.

A five-man medical team participated in the hour-long operation which started at 5:30 a.m. Tuesday. After the operation — described as relatively simple — doctors told a news conference that the former chief executive was "doing well."

Hickman, an assistant professor of surgery at the UCLA School of Medicine, called the operation "uneventful" and said, "Mr. Nixon is doing well .... recovering in the normal manner."

But just over six hours later, Nixon slipped into vascular shock which arrested the circulation of his blood for three hours before doctors and nurses were able to "stabilize" his condition.

Lungren said the complication was probably caused by "some retro-peritonaeal bleeding secondary to anticoagulation therapy." Retro-peritonaeal bleeding means bleeding behind the membrane that surrounds the abdomen.

Earlier, Lungren had said there was "somewhat more risk than normal" to the surgery because Nixon had been taking anticoagulants which left him prone to uncontrolled bleeding. After the surgery, however, Lungren told reporters there had been no excessive bleeding.

Lungren said that when Nixon went into shock "replacement of blood loss (through transfusions) and relaxation of anticoagulation therapy were instituted."

The amount of blood transfused into Nixon was not disclosed, but doctors not connected with Nixon's case said that in situations such as his, massive blood transfusions are normally required.

Alternator taken from parked truck

Police reported Wednesday that an alternator was stolen off a new Datsun pick-up truck belonging to Mid-Mo Datsun, 3400 South Limit.

The $103.27 alternator was discovered missing by a company employe Tuesday morning. It was not known when the theft occured.

In other police news, Cindy K. Thorne, 222 East 16th, reported that a tape player and numerous tapes were stolen from her car sometime Tuesday night. The car was parked at 16th and Grand when the $150 in items were taken.

29th subpoena is issued by jurors

The 29th subpoena was issued Wednesday in Circuit Court by the Pettis County grand jury. The subpoena calls for Curt Davis, Fifth and Quincy, to appear before the jury at 10 a.m. Thursday. He is to bring all photographs and slides he took at the Missouri State Fairgrounds in relation to the Ozark Music Festival from July 15 to July 23.

Re-appearing before the grand jury Wednesday morning was Bennett Cash, treasurer of Musical Production Inc., promoters of the festival. He testified before the jury on Oct. 9. Cash was subpoenaed at that time, but he was only asked to come Wednesday.

No indictments have been issued by the grand jury since it began investigating the music festival in early September.

Prostitution

None of the officers, however, said they ever received any orders from Miller himself.

Liston also testified Wednesday morning.

Referring to the charge against Miller that alleges he threatened Liston with disbarment if he continued the investigation, Liston quoted Miller as saying he had a "statement in (his) file that the attorney general's office would be interested in." Liston said the chief then asked him who the head of the Pettis County Bar Association was and who Harold Barrick is. Barrick is the head of the Missouri Bar Associations disciplinary committee.

Liston also quoted Miller as saying that he had "embarrassing information" that would be made public if the charges against Miller were made public.

In other action Wednesday morning, attorney William F. Brown, who is representing the City Council in the investigation, said he had thrown out charge number 8 on the 10-charge indictment.

The charge alleged that Miller abused his authority by ordering only a 10-day suspension for two police officers who allegedly discharged weapons inside the Sportsman's Club, while a black officer, Levoy City, was dismissed from the force for being found in a hotel room with a woman in Knob Noster in May, 1970.

City testified that the police personnel board later reversed the dismissal to a 90-day suspension.

Also testifying Wednesday morning were Jones; Sheriff Emmett Fairfax; Doug Kneibert, editor of The Sedalia Democrat-Capital; and Joe Dayringer, a Highway Patrol trooper.

Dayringer said he always had cooperation from Miller. Jones continued his earlier testimony concerning negotiations with Miller and alleged ticket fixing incidents; Fairfax said he never received reports from police on alleged burglaries by two officers in 1968; and Kneibert said a story on the dismissal of Patrolman Darrell Burris appeared in the Nov. 2, 1972, Sedalia Capital.

Eleven of the 21 persons subpoenaed by the city had testified as of noon Wednesday. Wesner will call his witnesses after Brown presents his evidence.

Jones testified at the three-hour opening session Tuesday night that he offered Miller a demotion to the rank of patrolman after he first asked the chief to resign. Jones said Miller's job would have been as a "police technician."

Wesner asked Jones, "Explain why if a man is guilty to all these things (10 charges) you would consider to retain him as a patrolman, street sweeper or anything else?"

"Because in one conversation he (Miller) said he was concerned ... with his financial stability," Jones said. He added that it also was the desire of some council members to "work something out."

"How come he's here and didn't accept it(demotion)?" Wesner asked.

"I don't know," Jones said.

Also testifying Tuesday night were Jewell Riley, a former Sedalia police lieutenant; and Henry Keeler, former prosecuting attorney for Pettis County and now the Probate and Magistrate Court judge of Moniteau County.

Riley said that on July 16, 1967, he was reprimanded by Miller for making three prostitution-related arrests the night of July 15 at the Sportsman's Club No. 2, East St. Louis and Washington. Riley's allegation is one of 10 charges that formed the basis of the suspension.

Riley quoted Miller as saying: "You made a big mistake last night, didn't you? ... You will not raid this place anymore." Riley said he didn't.

Wesner told Riley that since police records show the raid occurred on a Saturday, his conversation with Miller at the police station would have had to occur on a Sunday, the regular day off for both Miller and Riley. Riley later said that the conversation could have taken place on his next working day, which would have been July 17. Wesner pointed out, however, that Miller is charged with issuing the reprimand on July 16.

Riley, who was on the stand for about 45 minutes, also testified that Miller allowed former policemen Charles Shepard and Robert Lewis to resign without charges being brought against them. Riley said there was "substantial evidence" that the two had been involved in a "large number" of burglaries which allegedly occurred before May, 1968.

"I urged the chief these men ought to be brought before the prosecutor, but he told me he would rather handle it," Riley said. The allegation also is one of the 10 charges that led to Miller's suspension.

Wenser asked Riley why he didn't go to the prosecutor himself. Riley said it was the "chief's place" to do this. Riley resigned from the department in October, 1969, after joining the force in May, 1955.

Wesner tried to show that Riley had and still has a "deep-seeded animosity" toward Miller. He asked Riley whether he has a "deep hate" against Miller.

"I wouldn't call it a deep hate," Riley said.

"Well, a shallow hate," Wesner asserted.

Wesner, at one point, asked Riley about his physical ailments while employed.

Brown objected, saying the question was beside the point.

"The whole thing is beside the point," Wesner said, "but we didn't start it."

Wesner also questioned Jones on the amendment to the original charge regarding the alleged Lewis-Shepard burglaries. The amended charge deletes the mention of Shepard and Lewis making a confession, instead saying that "substantial evidence" existed of their alleged guilt. It also deletes the number of burglaries (44) to a "large number."

Was the first unamended charge true? Wesner asked, reminding Jones that he swore to the 10 charges with his signature.

"I do not believe it is true," Jones said.

Keeler, who was prosecuting attorney in 1968, said neither Miller, Riley or any other police officer came to him with information about the alleged Shepard-Lewis burglaries.

At one point in the hearing, shortly after the standing-room-only crowd of about 350 persons applauded a remark of Brown's, Fourth Ward Councilman Robert Eidson rose and asked for a recess.

Several persons in the audience started booing, telling him to "sit down."

First Ward Councilman and Mayor pro tem Don Broaddus, nevertheless, adjourned the hearing and later told the gallery to refrain from "applauding and jeering." The audience applauded a remark by Wesner one other time.

Jones is presiding at the hearing, but City Counselor Robert Fritz is advising on legal points of issue between Wesner and Brown.

It will take at least five City Council votes to dismiss Miller from office.

At the start of the hearing, the four Republican city councilmen sat on the lower of two rows of chairs in the jury box, and the four Democrats sat on the higher row.

Realizing the seating arrangement, the councilmen decided to have two members of each party sit together in rows.

Collector, treasurer races contested

For the second time in two years, county voters will elect two persons to succeed office-holders who were appointed to their position by the governor upon the death of elected officials.

In 1972, this occurred in the cases of the presiding judge and recorder of deeds. This year, the situation applies to the county collector and county treasurer. County Collector Raymond Wilder and County Treasurer Virgil Houchens both died in May.

The current county collector, Republican Mrs. Lorraine Jackson, 47, 502 Sunset Drive, has had 31 years of bookkeeping experience. A mother of two children, Mrs. Jackson has been active in Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts and 4-H. She is presently treasurer of the Bethel United Methodist Women and secretary of the Smith-Cotton Parent - Teacher - Student Association.

Commenting on her first few months in the job, Mrs. Jackson said "the bookkeeping was no problem, but I had to learn more about legal descriptions. I'm still learning, but I've got an experienced and very helpful staff." Asked if she foresaw any possible changes in the office, Mrs. Jackson said she had not yet made any definite decision in this area.

Mrs. Lorraine Jackson

Bob Leftwich

Bob Leftwich, 32, Hughesville, the Democratic challenger, survived a heated five-man primary battle to secure his party's nomination for collector. Leftwich, a graduate of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture, Columbia, has farmed in northeast Pettis County for 10 years. He also has taught science at Northwest High School in Hughesville.

He is on the board of Wesley Methodist Church and has served on the University of Missouri Extension Council in addition to being active in 4-H activities.

A major reason for his candidacy, Leftwich said, "is because I enjoy meeting and serving people." Although lacking extensive professional bookkeeping experience, Leftwich feels his experiences in handling funds at the University of Missouri and in other non-professional capacities provides a sufficient background from which to learn more about the office.

"I feel that the personal touch, in my position, is as important as anything," Leftwich says. "I plan on having a good staff to back me up and I'm extremely confident I can serve the citizens of Pettis County more than adequately."

Mary Helen Grimes

County treasurer candidate Mary Helen Grimes, 57, a Democrat, 1103 West Third, is vying to direct the office in which she has served as deputy for 19 years. Following Houchens' death last spring, Mrs. Grimes has continued to serve as deputy for Paul Steinkuhler, who was named by Republicans to fill Houchens' post until the first of the year.

Asked why she was running for the office, Mrs. Grimes said "when Virgil passed away, I simply felt that I was the most qualified person in the county to take his place. I know the ins-and-outs of this office and am also prepared to assume any new changes which being a second-class county may bring with it."

Mrs. Lillian Hamlin

A bookkeeper for 20 years, Republican candidate Mrs. Lillian Hamlin, 62, 1010 Crescent Drive, feels this record-keeping background satisfactorally qualifies her for the position of treasurer. She is also a member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church and has participated in many community activities.

If elected, she said, "I will serve the people of Pettis County with honesty, courtesy, integrity and efficiency. I think it will be a definite honor and privilege to do this. I believe any citizen who has something to contribute to his community, county or country should do so and that's what I feel I am doing."

Nixon legal fund is in the red

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rabbi Baruch Korff says his fund to pay former President Richard M. Nixon's legal fees is $99,428 in the red with more bills expected.

A source close to Nixon in San Clemente said that in the face of mounting hospital and legal costs, Korff's President Nixon Justice Fund will provide "essential assistance for Nixon to pay his bills.

"His entire finances could be substantially wiped out in a year," the San Clemente source said.

Korff said the fund had $9,325 on hand as of Saturday. He said it owes $77,753 in fees to the firm of Nixon's lawyer, Herbert J. Miller, plus a $31,000 loan to another Korff-organized Nixon defense committee.

Korff said he has been told the fund will be billed for another $221,000 in legal fees for Nixon.

He refused to say whether that estimate came from Nixon's staff in San Clemente or from his lawyers in Washington. He said he had no details on what specific legal work the additional bills would be for.

Korff said the $77,753 bill plus $30,000 already paid to Miller's law firm includes legal work for suits surrounding the challenged Sept. 7 agreement on Nixon's White House tapes and papers plus a number of subpoenas served on Nixon.

The fund paid for Nixon's suit seeking to have the tapes and papers shipped to storage near San Clemente, Korff said. He said 28 individuals and organizations are suing Nixon and the government to nullify the agreement that would give Nixon eventual control over the tapes and papers.

Miller's law firm refused comment on what Nixon's legal fees are likely to be and how much of its bills will be going to Korff's fund.

The San Clemente source said he had no hard figures but that legal costs have gone to $100,000 in three months. He described as reasonable estimate that they would involve at least an additional $200,000.

Korff said the fund was incorporated Oct. 1 to pay any Nixon legal bills related to his presidency, including any appearance at the Watergate cover-up trial and other proceedings.

Police awaiting autopsy results

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP)— Alex West, 49, who police said was doused with gasoline and set afire last week, died Tuesday at the University of Kansas Medical Center.

Maj. James Campbell of the Kansas City, Mo., Police Department said if an autopsy determines that West died of burns, police will ask that murder charges be filed against an unidentified woman sought in connection with the incident.

Pretrial staff be doubled

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The St. Louis staff of state pretrial release investigators will be doubled within the next 30 days so that a state supreme court order can be implemented in the city.

State Probation and Parole Board Supervisor Gail Hughes said Tuesday the cost of beefing up the St. Louis pretrial release program to provide around the clock investigations will be about $100,000.

But Hughes said the resulting decrease in jail population would save taxpayer money and he pointed out the funds to expand the program and hire eight new bond investigators will be obtained from the federal government.

In the past jailed persons have been held 24 to 48 hours before investigations for pretrial release, or bail, began. But the Supreme Court, in endorsing a city circuit court judge proposal, ordered all persons to receive a bail bond hearing within 12 hours of their arrest.

The pretrial release program is designed as an alternative to the traditional bail bonding system and it involves the evaluation of a person as a risk for release pending his court appearance. It is aimed at helping persons who have no money for bond.

Collapse requires treatment

ARMOUR, S.D. (AP)— Gary M. Miller, 27, charged by Johnson County, Kansas, authorities with killing his wife and setting his suburban Kansas City home afire, was being treated at a hospital here Tuesday night after collapsing in the county jail at Lake Andes.

Miller, arrested last week when he arrived in South Dakota to attend his wife's funeral, collapsed as Charles Mix County Sheriff Ruben Huber was preparing to take him to Sioux Falls, S. D. Huber said. Johnson County Sheriff Fred Allenbrand and R. L. Grove, an Overland Park, Kan., detective, arrived in Sioux Falls Tuesday to escort Miller back to Kansas.

Huber speculated Miller's collapse was due to stress. He said Tuesday night Miller probably would be taken to Sioux Falls today.

A hospital spokesman declined comment on Miller's condition.

Miller was charged in a warrant with first-degree murder and aggravated arson. The body of Mrs. Mary J. Miller, 25, was found in a bedroom of the Miller home in the predawn hours of Oct. 21 after firemen were summoned to the Miller residence. Police said an autopsy indicated she had died about five hours before the fire was reported.

The Millers moved to Overland Park from South Dakota.

Colon condition linked to nerves

Dear Dr. Lamb — Could you please tell me what nerves have to do in causing a colon condition and if nerves can be the only cause? How serious is it if the colon should perforate? Could this also cause an abscess on the colon and liver?

Dear Reader — There is a network of nerve fibers that penetrate the wall of the colon. These little nerves stimulate the muscle in the wall of the colon to contract or relax. They affect the blood flow to the colon by constricting or relaxing the blood vessels and they affect the amount of secretions or muscus formed in the colon.

The nerves function on their own without your conscious control. The network is hooked up to the hypothalamus in your brain which is the seat of your emotions. Depending upon what emotion you are experiencing, the colon will be engorged with blood or literally blush, or the blood will be drained out of it, making it pale.

If your colon were readily visible to other people you would have a hard time concealing your emotions.

It follows that anxiety and nervous states can send impulses to the colon that can cause overcontraction or spasm of colon muscles or form excess mucus and otherwise affect its function. Depending on the balance of factors, this can result in diarrhea, constipation, or spastic colon.

Now, nervous states are not the only thing, though, that can cause dysfunction of the colon. Various diseases of the colon itself can cause dysfunction. These include diseases such as food poisoning or even a tumor of the colon.

The function of the colon is also affected by what you eat and drink. Some people do not tolerate coffee very well at all, and it can affect the function of the colon. Various flavor oils can irritate the colon as can spices such as garlic.

If you eat food that contains no bulk, the colon may not have enough undigested fiber material to work against and it will over-contract or go into spasm. That is one reason why you need roughage in your diet, specifically bulky vegetables and cereals.

The colon won't perforate from nerves alone. You usually have to have had small pocket-like formations of diverticula formed first. These can rupture, and the effect may be much like a ruptured appendix, though usually on the left side. And, like a ruptured appendix, if the perforation is large and permits bacteria from the colon to be seeded in the abdomen, it could cause a liver abscess or abscesses elswhere in the abdomen.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Do the fats and oils in pecans, almonds, and avocados cause cholesterol to build up in the body?

Dear Reader — None of these contain cholesterol. However, too many calories of any foods, and particularly fats, apparently stimulate the formation of excess fatty particles and cholesterol in the body in most people. If you stay lean and don't eat too many of these foods, they are fine. All three of these items are high in fat content, even though they contain no cholesterol.

Pumpkin and friend

Lori Hull, two-years old, can't get her arms around her 70-pound friend, let alone take it home to have her mother carve it for her. The pumpkin is 40 pounds heavier than Lori, and is almost five feet wide around the middle. Her father came to the rescue, however and Lori will have the large pumpkin at home for Halloween this Thursday.

Eagleton denies 'two-faced' charge

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., denied Monday that he was "two-faced" in his support of the McDonnell Douglas Corp. F15 fighter and criticized Republican Thomas B. Curtis for distorting his views.

Eagleton, who is opposing Curtis in the Nov. 5 election, said he had consistently supported the F15 and that Curtis had improperly represented his position concerning the plane.

Eagleton said he was "deeply disturbed that Mr. Curtis, at the end of his career of public service, has embarked on a concerted program of outright distortions of my views."

Fire destroys 600 wooded acres of park

GRAFTON, Ill. (AP)—About 600 wooded acres of the Pere Marquette State Park near Grafton, Ill., were destroyed by a fire of unknown origin Monday.

The blaze began early Monday, reached its height at about noon and was considered under control at about 6 p.m., according to Grafton Fire Chief Wilford Campbell.

There were no injuries.

Campbell said the woods in the 8,000-acre park were "tinder dry" because of the lack of rain in the last three weeks. Illinois state police were investigating a burned-out car found along a trail where it was believed the fire began.

Q — I would like to know why the election workers did not all get the same pay for the same work by the County Clerk, and is this going to be the same for the up coming election? Why has this been changed from previous years? — Mrs. J. J.

A — Pettis County Clerk Mary Jane Wilson said Missouri Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick sent out letters to the counties June 24 reminding clerks of the Fair Labor Standards Amendment of 1974, signed into law by former President Nixon on April 8, 1974.

This law includes election officials in the $1.90 minimum wage rate. Under the law, $24.70 is the minimum that can be paid to election workers for a 13 hour day, according to Mrs. Wilson. She said the workers were told to keep a record of their hours and were paid accordingly. Some voting locations were able to finish before others, she said, accounting for the difference in pay.

Q — What happened to the waste paper drives for old newspapers and magazines that were being conducted about a year ago? I have been saving newspaper for some time and would like to give them to someone for recycling. — J.H.

A — Dr. Ruth Glazebrook, who has been involved in paper drives in the past, said, "The price of paper has gone down and it doesn't pay anymore to pick it up." She said the last paper drive to her knowledge was last spring.

Q — I read where the Pettis County Board of Jury Commissioners met and selected jurors for the November term of the Circuit Court. Who makes up this board and how do they pick jurors? — Mrs. J.L.

A — The board is made up of Circuit Judge Frank Meyer, County Judges Harry Walch, John Bluhm Jr. and E. L. Birdsong, Circuit Court Clerk Bill Lyles and Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, acting in an advisory position.

The jury members are selected no less than 30 days before the commencement of the next term of circuit court, according to law. Lyles said the names are selected from the lists of registered voters in the county. A person can not serve more than once on the jury in the same year. Twenty-five jury members are selected, along with 25 alternates.

Measure requires financial disclosures

By JIM CHURCH
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—Missourians will have a chance next Tuesday to enact a campaign election law that its backers say will let the sun shine on the election process and its opponents say will discourage the average citizen from participating.

Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick, the state's chief elections officer, says the 9,566-word measure, Proposition 1, requires economic disclosures which will stop people from running for offices on the local level such as the city council or school board.

He says those candidates, as well as contributors and small political committees, also will be turned off by the proposed law's strict reporting requirements. However, Kirkpatrick says he favors the general concept of the proposition.

Some legislators and organizations agree with Kirkpatrick, although there has been no concerted public drive against the measure. Few candidates have spoken against the measure, but many candidates have endorsed it. The platforms of both political parties call for Passage. The Missouri Farm Bureau recently came out for it.

Missourians for Honest Elections, a St. Louis-based group headed by Frank Nutt, and Gov. Christopher S. Bond and Lt. Gov. William C. Phelps say the good outweighs the bad.

Nutt's group worked with state reps. Steve Vossmeyer, D-St. Louis, John Buechner, R-Kirkwood, George Donegan, R-Springfield, and George Hoblitzelle, R-Ladue, in a five-week petition drive to get the measure on the ballot after the Legislature failed in the closing hours of its session to enact a law.

"Public office is a sacred public trust," says Bond in his campaign statements on behalf of the proposition.

"Those of us who seek public office owe it to the public to disclose all of our campaign contributions and expenditures before each election, and to disclose enough information about our personal finances so that the public can judge whether we have a potential conflict of interest."

The proposed law requires candidates who spend $500 or more on an election to make public their contributions of $25 or more. It requires candidates and political committees to report contributions and expenditures 40 days before each election, primary and general, seven days before and within 30 days after.

Primary and general elections are treated as two separate elections.

The reports must cover all contributions or expenditures made for a a candidate as early as two years before the first report is due.

Committees also have to file annual reports, as well as reports every 90 days for four years as long as a balance or debt of $100 or more remains in the particular election fund. Records must be retained for two years after the election.

The law will be administered by a six-member elections eommission to be named by the governor from 18 persons nominated by the state Supreme Court.

Reports for state elective offices, elective circuit, magistrate and appellate judgeships and the legislature must be filed with the secretary of state.

Congressional candidates are not mentioned in the law, although candidates are defined as "an individual who seeks nomination or election to public office." Congressional candidates are covered by federal law.

Kirkpatrick and labor groups say the measure will discourage candidates from running for unpaid positions on the local level, because it requires disclosing the source of gifts and income of $100 or more during the 12 months before he or she files for office.

"In such a case the law requires the listing of only the business itself as the source of the candidate's income," says John Rava, St. Louis attorney and secretary of the Missourians for Honest Elections.

"If a grocer for example," says Bond, "has a business from which he derives his income, he would not be required to go back and examine the records of the business and see who purchased groceries from him. As I understand the law, he would be required to state that he derives his income from the sale of groceries."

The proposed law states in section 7, subsection 5, where the required reports are outlined:

"A specific listing of the source, by name and address, of any gifts or income in excess of $100 received by the candidate or the candidate's spouse or minor children during the preceding 12 months or the time of the last report, whichever is later.

The Missouri Association of Osteopaths opposed the law on the grounds that it would require doctors who are candidates to name their clients. The State Medical Association has not publicly taken a position.

The State Bar Association supported the disclosure of campaign contributions and expenses, but opposed revealing the names of clients.

Kirkpatrick says the names would have to be revealed.

"Sources of income received outside of his business would have to be specifically reported," Rava says. "The requirement to list specific customers applies only to persons furnishing personal services, such as doctors or architects."

Subsection 6 of section 7, listing requirements for persons who render services (such as doctors and lawyers) says:

"A specific listing of the source, by name and address, of any gifts, salaries, fees, or other income which for the 12 month period preceding the filing date individually or in the aggregate exceeds $500 which has been paid on behalf of or for services rendered by the candidate to any sole proprietorship, partnership or corporation in which the candidate or the candidate's spouse holds an interest of 10 per cent or more."

Bond and leaders of Missourians for Honest Elections say the Elections Commission could keep the names confidential.

Kirkpatrick says the law would supersede rule-making authority of the commission unless the law specifically says the commission can make rules on confidentially. the proposed law does not say that.

"The most frequently mentioned example is that of the psychiatrist," Bond says.

"Many of his clients might have a reluctance to have their identities disclosed. The elections commission could make those disclosures confidential. On the other hand, if a lobbying association were to retain that psychiatrist, then his employment would not come within the scope of that exemption."

"I'd go to jail before I disclose the name of a person coming to me for professional care," says Mayor Tom Anderson of Columbia, a psychiatrist.

State Sen. Larry Marshall, R-Columbia, said he would introduce an amendment on confidentiality if the elections commission, by its rule-making authority, couldn't provide confidentiality for physicians.

However, Marshall said, the supreme courts of two states have ruled that to disclose the name of a client does not violate the confidential lawyer-client relationship.

The economic disclosure provision would not apply to candidates who spend less than $500 on their campaigns, say Bond, Missourians for Honest Elections and Rep. Vic Downing, D-Bragg City, chairman of the House Elections Committee.

The exemption applies to contributions and expenditures and not to the economic disclosure section, Kirkpatrick says, pointing to section 8 of the proposition, which says:

"The provisions of this act regarding the reporting of campaign contributions and expenditures shall not apply to any candidate or to any political committee acting for, on behalf of, or in favor of any candidate if the candidate or political committee does not in the aggregate receive or expend more than $500 for any election and files the exemption affidavit required by this subsection. However, this exemption from reporting does not excuse a candidate or committee from complying with all other requirements of this act."

Later in the section, the words "contributions and expenditures" are repeated, and there is the phrase, "and all other reporting requirements shall be complied with."

Here are other major features of the proposed law:

--No anonymous contributions of more than $5 each or more than $500 in the aggregate could be received for each election. The excess would go to the state treasury.

--Organizations, political committees and individuals could not give more than $10,000 to any one candidate for each election ($20,000 for both the general and primary) and could not give more than $50,000 in any one year to all candidates. The $10,000 could be exceeded if it is not more than 20 per cent of the candidate's total spending limit.

--Labor unions and corporations could not contribute directly but union officers or coporation officers could do so through voluntary organizations.

--Required is a listing of any business or investment in which the candidate or his or her spouse and minor children have a financial interest in excess of $1,000.

--The candidate must give a receipt and keep a copy for any cash contributions of $50 or more.

--Voluntary, anonymous contributions collected at a luncheon, for example, can be made but must not exceed $100, and shall be attributed to the person who transmits the funds to the candidate.

--A candidate or his spouse or immediate family could not give more than $35,000 to the candidate for state office for each election.

--Records of contributions and expenditures by candidates and political committees must be kept current within 10 days and retained for at least two years after the last report.

--Committees must obtain written authorization from a candidate to make expenditures for his or her campaign.

--The spending limits are $18 per 100 voters or $9 per 100 inhabitants, for statewide candidates. The number of voters is based on the total vote for president in the preceding election. For non-statewide offices, the limits are $12 for each 100 inhabitants within the district, county, city or other political subdivision, and $25 for each 100 residents of the county, district, city or political subdivision, whichever is greater.

The current limit is a flat $25 per 100 voters for all elections. The limit under current law for a governor's race would be about $500,000 for each election, primary and general. The new limit would be about $423,000 for each election in the governor's race.

--A committee can be one or more persons who spend $100 on behalf of candidate.

Reports will be filed with the authority responsible for conducting the election and in the county where the candidate lives, if his district covers more than one county.

The secretary of state will receive reports from candidates and committees

Prisoner held in stabbing

FORT MADISON, Iowa (AP)—Officials at the Iowa State Penitentiary here say a 21-year-old prisoner from Columbia, Mo., is being held in special confinement in connection with the stabbing of another prisoner Monday.

Authorities said Tuesday that charges were pending against William Stapleton, who is serving 15 years on a Polk County conviction of larceny from a person. He was sent to the Iowa Men's Reformatory, Anamosa, Jan. 28, 1972, but was transferred here last May 22.

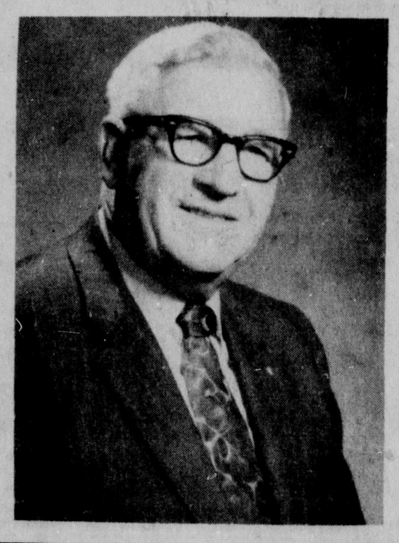

Lee Hawkins, 61, who is serving a life sentence from Black Hawk County on a first degree murder conviction, was stabbed as he emerged from a dining hall. Authorities said a homemade knife was found in the area.

The Hawkins incident sparked a shakedown search of the prison Tuesday which authorities said turned up a dozen homemade knives.

Stapleton and another inmate were being held separately from other prisoners.

Wife of state auditor

Jan Ashcroft says husband is best qualified for job

By KAREN FLANDERMEYER
Editor, Living Today

Mrs. Janet Ashcroft, wife of State Auditor John D. Ashcroft, was in Sedalia Tuesday as part of a campaign trek with Missouri's First

Mrs. Janet Ashcroft

Lady, Mrs. Carolyn Bond, through four counties, including the cities of California, Sedalia, Warrensburg and Harrisonville.

Mrs. Ashcroft was stumping for her husband's election Nov. 5 as state auditor. He is opposed by Democrat George Lehr.

Mrs. Ashcroft said her husband has the finest qualifications a candidate could have. "I don't think there's any qualification better than having been a successful state auditor."

Mrs. Bond added that voters have "John's record and performance, instead of promises" on which to base their votes.

"Over an audit a day during the last fiscal year" has characterized Ashcroft's service, Mrs. Ashcroft said. Ashcroft was appointed state auditor by Gov. Bond Jan. 8, 1973. Bond held the office before his election as governor.

Ashcroft's recommendations have resulted in vast savings for Missouri, Mrs. Ashcroft said, to the tune of $27 million.

Of course, she admitted, "There's much more to be done in county and state audits." But she felt, as his recommendations are taken, "it should be easier in the future to get to all county and state agencies more frequently."

Mrs. Ashcroft said her education only serves to further her understanding of the state auditor's office and the importance of her husband's duties. She was graduated from the University of Chicago School of Law in 1968 and was admitted to the Missouri Bar in September of that year.

Mrs. Ashcroft said, "I've found Missourians are the finest people I've ever met." She described them as "tremendously cordial and especially nice in Sedalia" where people remarked what a good job Ashcroft has done and how much money he has saved Missouri, she said.

She said she feels that a wife's campaigning for her husband is "very helpful." Remembering that before her husband was involved in politics "I enjoyed seeing the wives as well as the candidates," she remarked. And after Ashcroft began his political career, "I could never sit at home. I feel like I'm helping."

Urging Missourians to "get out and vote," Mrs. Ashcroft said, "I've been to just about every county. I love to campaign."

For trick-or-treaters

Simple beef chili makes a hearty snack for worn-out trick-or-treaters, followed by the sweet taste of bite-sized donuts and Goblin Pitcher Punch.

Recipes brighten Hallows' Eve

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

All Hallows' Eve is celebrated in many ways throughout the country but sometime during the evening wee hob-goblins and ghosts and their more mature counterparts get together for a hearty snack. A good one is a pot of Beef Chili that you can keep on the stove simmering until everyone is ready to dip into it. Serve with wedges of sliced bread, donuts and cider.

HALLOWEEN BEEF CHILI

- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 onion
- 1 (15-ounce) can red kidney beans
- 1 (15-ounce) can barbecue beans
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon chili powder

Brown beef in skillet. Add chopped onion and cook until onion is wilted. Stir in undrained beans, salt and chili powder. Simmer 15 minutes to blend flavors. Makes 6 servings.

Bobbing for apples seems a lost art for those who take part in Halloween parties. However, all still expect some real treats at the end of their tricks around the neighborhood. Those who want to keep a small goblins' party simple may serve tea-orange punch with bit-sized donuts and cookies.

GOBLIN PITCHER PUNCH

- 2 tablespoons instant tea
- 1 (46 ounces) can orange Hawaiian punch, chilled
- 1 cinnamon stick
- 2 lemons, sliced
- Whole cloves
- 1 12 (ounces) bottle lemon-lime carbonated beverage

Combine tea, orange punch and cinnamon stick. Insert 2 or 3 cloves into each lemon slice and add to tea mixture. When ready to serve, pour over ice cubes and add carbonated beverage. Makes about 2 quarts.

Cuban food and home traditions appear in Florida

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Food, home decoration and even backyards are changing in some areas in Miami where more than a quarter of a million people now speak the Spanish language.

In fact, the rocking chair may even be a symbol of the Cuban settlement. It was the first thing older refugees wanted when they arrived.

"It is an old custom to sit on your porch and rock. When my mother-in-law arrived from Cuba in 1966, she had to have one made. Now they are easy to get and it looks more like Cuba every minute," explained pretty Hortensia Padilla, 37. She has been active with the International Rescue Committee and hospital committees.

She and her husband, Dr. Jose Padilla, a surgeon, now help support some of their Cuban relatives in the area and both mothers live with them, she explained. Havana-born, she was educated in New England and is well known in social circles. Her husband trained in the United States before beginning his practice 16 years ago.

The last freedom flight was made last year and although some relatives still come from Cuba by way of Spain, it isn't easy. To do so, her cousin, before she left, "had to work the land for two years, herded to work each day in an open truck to get to her job."

It is the southwestern part of Miami, known as Little Havana, that reflects the real changes that have come to the city. In restaurants one may eat tasajo, a salted beef served on rice, and tostones — plantain pounded and fried. Yucca, a vegetable root, boiled and served with a dressing of olive oil, lime juice, onion and garlic, is very tasty. Black beans on white rice is popular with pork, and codfish fritters is a favored dish.

Many taste treats — fried banana, Malanga (potato chips), guava jellies and fried boniato, a sort of sweet potato, have found their way into the average household. In fact, some of the best food in Miami may be found in the Cuban area.

In his home, sculptor Manuel Carbonell concocts paella, the Spanish seafood, chicken and rice dish, adding a Cuban touch — chorizo, bits of pork and ham. Some Cubans, like Carbonell, have parlayed their talents into a happy transition from their native land. Arriving with little money, he has made his way back — his sculpture is on permanent exhibit in New York's Schoenman Gallery, and he owns a comfortable rambling home that is shared with two sisters, Josephina and Angela.

Their backyard resembles the one they left in Cuba. There are the little palms growing on slopes, and a Tinajon, the big urn that is traditional for keeping foods cold. And there are the taboretes — the siesta chairs covered with skin — propped against framboyan trees. He has painted a traditional scene on the wall of the terrace side of his house, much like those in Cuban courtyards.

"When we have breakfast here, you could imagine you are in Cuba," he said. "We love it here."

Other successful Cubans have chosen to move on. The intellectual author Carlos Ripoll has become well known as a Latin expert, achieving a PhD summa cum laude at New York University. He has received grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities and is teaching at Queens College.

Some are not so lucky. Lawyers, architects and other professional people work as elevator operators, taxi drivers, waiters, store clerks. But some have begun their own businesses in toys, dolls, cigars, furniture, enterprises that were lost in Cuba.

"Older people somehow resist learning English, which restricts them in their professions," Mrs. Padilla observed. "Young girls become bilingual so they can work in many jobs — Americans try to become bilingual by hiring them. Where no language barrier exists, law or pharmacy is pursued and there are a number of Cuban women doctors here."

Some families have joined forces. One outstanding tailor, Pepe, has a son, wife and daughter who cut, make buttonholes and help manage his establishment, Mrs. Padilla remarked.

Polly's pointers

Kids' pictures need pick up

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is that no one seems to make shoe strings short enough for small shoe sizes. The shortest ones I can find are 18 inches long. When cut off they are a mess. — LINDA.

DEAR POLLY — I cannot imagine M.M.P. wanting to use a brass spray on her copper wash boiler. Half the fun of owning good brass and copper is cleaning it. She should clean her wash boiler with a good copper polish and lots of elbow grease. Then, if she feels she must, the piece could be lacquered to hold the shine. I have even removed lacquer that came on brass lamps (with a good varnish remover) to polish them for the look I like and find this needs to be done only twice a year. I feel no one should ruin a good piece of Americana by spraying it. The dents and glowing color of a polished copper wash boiler are beautiful. — G.C.S.

DEAR POLLY — I find cabbage odors are practically eliminated if an outside stalk of celery is added when you put the cabbage on to cook. Discard celery when cooking is finished.

To remove an onion odor from the hands I "soap" them good with an unpeeled raw potato under cold running water.

Make a belt hanger out of an ordinary wooden coat hanger by screwing cup hooks all across the hanger bar.

When draping tie-back curtains lower the blinds to the height you want the tie-backs. Fasten each tie-back to the casing at the bottom of the blind and all the curtains will be draped at the same height and with no measuring.

When baby outgrows his high chair remove the arms and have a convenient kitchen stool that is also a nice height for ironing.

When the weather is warm a few crushed moth balls in the bottom of a trash can will keep the flies and other insects away. — SUE E.

DEAR POLLY — When cutting out a garment to be made and you are not too sure about the fit of the pattern cut the notches for matching seams out rather than in as the pattern indicates. This will allow for a larger seam in case the garment needs letting out. — LORENE.

DEAR POLLY — Empty rolls left from toilet tissue or paper towels are great for storing panty hose and help keep the drawer neat. On the outside of the roll write condition of the contents such as "nude toes" and those with "runs" and those that can only be worn with boots or slacks. — D.P.

DEAR POLLY — I have just finished rewebbing several patio chairs and discovered that after the webbing was cut to the proper lengths and the ends folded to form a triangle the webbing had a tendency to ravel. I touched up each cut end with white glue, using a stick that comes in frozen suckers and let the glue dry for a few minutes and then went on to fold the webbing. The glue prevented the webbing from raveling and I had a much neater job when the chairs were finished. — FLORENCE.

DEAR POLLY — Discarded plastic tablecloths with flannel backs are useful for so many things when carried in the trunk of your car. They could even be used to keep a person warm when stranded during very gold weather. — M.N.Z.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I have six pictures of my children that were in frames. They are spotty, have fingerprints and dust on them from moving and being knocked off tables. I do not want to throw them away. Is there anything I could use to clean these pictures without messing up the finish before I put them in new unbreakable frames? I would appreciate any suggestions. — MRS. F.P.

Lay midwives who assist at many home deliveries practice illegally

By LINDA KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The midwife carried her satchel into the rough-hewn cabin in the northern California hills. A woman in labor lay on a bed. Her husband heated water in the kitchen.

As the labor progressed, the midwife started to belly dance while her assistant beat a drum.

The husband came to soothe his wife, helping her breathing and contractions fall into rhythm with the dancing midwife.

Slowly the child was born, without the help of drugs or forceps or any trappings of modern technology. They named him Bambi.

This experience, described by a midwife who was present, is part of a growing home birth revival. Those involved attribute the renewed popularity of home birth to the back-to-nature movement and to a desire for a birth experience free of the routine and sterility of hospitals.

Mothers are delivering their babies to the accompaniment of belly dancers as women reportedly did in ancient Egypt; some give birth outside, beneath towering redwoods. Others prefer a do-it-yourself style like great-grandmother used.

Although home birth is legal, most doctors consider it a needless risk and refuse to attend women at home. So young couples seek out lay midwives.

Midwifery has been illegal in California since 1949. Most midwives can be contacted only through the underground grapevine of counter-culture youths.

Northern California has become the center of the nation's home birth movement with lay midwives in attendance. Sixteen other states permit midwifery under colonial or early 19th Century laws never removed from the books. But in most of these states — among them New York, Oklahoma, Texas and Washington — few lay midwives are found.

Eliza and Steve Robinson tried unsuccessfully to find a midwife in San Francisco. Then friends told them about the Berkeley Birth Group across the bay. The group includes a lay midwife, nurse-midwife, an apprentice midwife and a pediatrician, all operating out of a one-story bungalow.

Participatory parenthood

Typically proud new parents Bill and Annie Holmes, posing at home in Berkeley, Calif., with baby Jason, have an added reason for satisfaction over their first child's birth. Jason was delivered at home, with a team of lay midwife, apprentice and pediatrician from the Berkeley Birth Group in attendance. Bill Holmes said he found homebirth let him participate actively — "I cut the cord." (AP)

Robinson, sitting with his arm around Eliza during a recent visit to the birth group, said they never considered going to a hospital "because hospitals are places for sick people and they don't do babies right."

"Having a baby at home fits in with our whole life-style," Robinson said. "There's no reason to depend on the capitalistic system if you can do something outside it and can do it in a more relaxed and friendly, open way."

On a couch near Robinson in the wood-beamed living room used as a waiting room, Annie and Bill Holmes waited to see the pediatrician for their new son's first checkup.

"We wanted the baby right after he was born," said Mrs. Holmes, 21, as she nursed 12-day-old Jason. "A hospital told me they'd put the baby in a warming bed at least four hours before I could hold him. And we wanted midwives; they're more personal."

The Berkeley Birth Group says the delivery was one of about 25 they have assisted at since January and all were successful. Forty pregnant women currently attend their natural childbirth clinics and prenatal care sessions.

The clinics and prenatal care sessions are legal; only the actual practice of midwifery is subject to prosecution.

Neither the California Medical Association nor the state Department of Health keeps statistics on the number of home births. Both report that many such births are not registered.

Dr. Thomas Elmendorf, CMA past president, agrees that people have the right to home birth. But he believes it is a potentially dangerous choice.

"The odds are that in an uncomplicated situation a mother can deliver at home successfully," Elmendorf said in an interview. "But when you're going to be right in the middle of a real emergency and need the highly technical facilities available at hospitals."

A male midwife in Humboldt County, one of the few men involved in such services, said he assisted a young couple this spring during the successful home birth of their second child.

They told him their first attempt had been unassisted and unsuccessful. The baby was buried without ceremony near their makeshift home in the ruggedly beautiful mountains of the county near the Oregon border.

"These people are understanding when that happens and if it happens again they'll bury it in the woods again," the midwife said in an interview. "They're adamant against having a baby in a hospital."

The problem, as the midwife perceives it, is that there are not enough people with his skills. So the young man, trained originally as a physician's assistant, has set up a school to train lay midwives.

Twenty women and five men are enrolled in his program, which includes courses in anatomy, natural childbirth, fetus growth, practical training and herbs.

The program also includes discussions on the folklore and spiritual side of midwifery. Like other lay midwives, the Humboldt County man believes the profession is more art than science.

Turning to midwives

A growing interest in homebirth in Northern California has resulted in centers such as the Berkeley Birth Group, where Sandra Masri of Oakland, Calif., is shown being examined. Homebirth is legal but most doctors consider it a needless risk, so young couples seek out midwives — although California outlawed midwifery in 1949, and most midwives can be contacted only through the underground grapevine of counter culture youths. Reduction in park services possible

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Service curtailments at some of the country's growing number of national park areas may be in the offing because of inflation and declining park usage, according to Deputy National Park Service Director Russell Dickenson.

Reductions "will be under study and we will make a judgment during the winter," Dickenson told newsmen here Monday during a break in the annual convention of the National Society For Park Resources.

"We're reaching a period of no growth," he said, pointing out that park attendance fell 8 per cent his year from 1973 when an 8 per cent boost in attendance was experienced. He said it was doubtful, however, that any parks would be closed.

Attandance drops were greatest in remote areas of the northwest, which has suffered gasoline shortages in the past year, Dickenson said, but attendance at parks near metropolitan areas showed an increase.

"We've been playing catch-up ball in meeting needs near urban areas," said Dwight Rettie, executive director of the 18,000-member National Recreation and Parks Association, which includes the National Society for Park Resources.

"We still have not learned the lesson of the '50s and the '60s," he contended. "If the areas near cities aren't preserved, they will be taken up by subdivisions."

The federal land and water conservation fund, he said, has done much to assist local governments in setting aside green areas, but Rettie called for a tripling of the fund's current budget of $300 million.

Both said they would encourage federal officials to keep tourism a high priority for gasoline allocation.

On the state level, James Wilson, director of the Department of Natural Resources, said attendance at state parks has dropped only 1 per cent this year compared to a 4 per cent decline in 1973.

Carless days for San Francisco

By GREGORY A. GROSS
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Employers throughout the city start asking San Francisco's 500,000 commuters today to give up their cars one day each week.

The object: Save fuel by breaking the car-commuting habit.

Thirteen major corporations already have agreed to urge all their employes — from top executives down to clerks — to use public transit instead of private autos once a week.

Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, who announced the carless-day plan Monday, urged employers to ask their workers to go along with the program he said could cut fuel usage 20 per cent and reduce the dependence on Arab oil.

"The only realistic way to beat the sheiks is to get out of our automobiles," Alioto said.

San Francisco's streets are fed by only three commuter arteries — the Golden Gate Bridge, San Francisco Bay Bridge and highway links to the San Francisco Peninsula on the south. Available mass transit includes the Bay Area Rapid Transit System, buses and trains.

The motto of Alioto's plan is "Once a week to WIN (Whip Inflation Now)." Its prime target is the suburban commuter.

Monday would be carless for employes of banks, stock brokerages and other financial institutions; Tuesday for the corporations; Wednesday for employes in city, state and federal government; Thursday for the city's two major utilities, Pacific Telephone and Pacific Gas and Electric Co.; and Friday for anyone not already covered.

The rotating no-car days would be coordinated with a program of staggered work hours in certain businesses to stretch out the peak commuter periods and avoid overloading public transportation.

The plan was prompted by President Ford's request to major cities to do something to cut auto usage and save fuel.

Sylvia Porter, chairman of the President's Citizen's Action Committee to fight inflation, praised Alioto for the move.

Some domestic policies eased

By KEN FREED
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chile's military dictatorship has eased some of its repressive domestic policies, but there is no sign democracy will return soon, U.S. intelligence sources say.

When the generals overthrew the elected government of Marxist President Salvadore Allende 13 months ago, they moved hard against anyone even remotely suspected of opposing the new regime, the sources said.

But the new government has eased its policies in the last six or seven months, the U.S. analysts said.

Two explanations are given for the shift.

First, the regime has increasing confidence in its own strength internally, primarily because an opposition has not formed. Second, the U.S. Congress has applied pressure with threats to cut off arms aid.

Chile's army is equipped almost entirely with U.S. weapons, and there are no other governments willing or able to become a major arms supplier to the junta.

The generals also realize they don't have many friends in the world and they need good relations with the United States, according to the American sources.

Still, this accommodating attitude has definite limits, their assessment holds.

The junta resents the congressional attitude, and U.S. experts are convinced such pressure won't work in the long run.

The generals are not about to become lackeys of Washington or be dictated to, is the way one analyst put it.

Even if all arms aid were ended, he said, the generals have enough equipment to handle any domestic problems. Their main problem would come if war broke out with traditional enemy Peru.

Chile would be hard put in such a fight, the sources said, but right now a Chile-Peru war is considered unlikely.

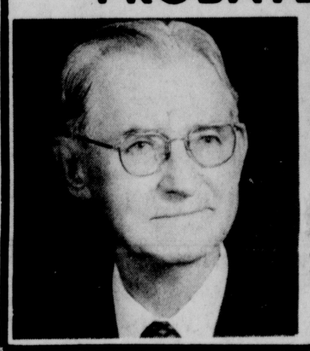

Viewed in this light, the U.S. experts say the best American policy is to keep Chile aware of criticism but continue arms supplies.

In any event, they add, the military regime appears to have little opposition in Chile and no return to democratic processes is expected for five or even 10 years.

Election '74

Two men run for auditor

In no instance in next Tuesday's general election is the impending elevation of Pettis County to a second class county more evident than in the race for county auditor, a position which does not exist in third and fourth class counties.

The newly-created position was the subject of some controversy here this fall as the two political parties differed in their interpretation of how the office should be filled.

County Republicans originally believed their recommended nominee would only need be approved by Gov. Christopher Bond before assuming office. Democrats, however, contended that, under a recent change in state statutes, the position should be filled by an election. A closer check of state laws in this area proved the Democrat interpretation to be correct. Two candidates are now seeking the position.

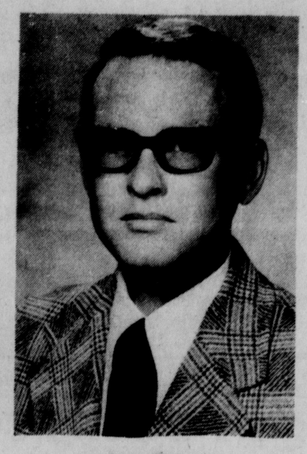

Frank Wagner

Accountant Frank Wagner, 1009 West Broadway, is the Republican candidate, chosen at a special party caucus.

Wagner, who has had many years of bookkeeping and accounting experience, is a member of several professional accounting societies. He has also been active in the Kiwanis Club, Farm Bureau and United Church of Christ. He has also served 12 years as County treasurer and five years as deputy county collector.

Commenting on his candidacy, Wagner said, "I'm qualified for the position based on my past experience. The firm I am associated with (Shirley Wagner Certified Public Accountant) has performed audits on banks, schools and cities. Based on these qualifications, I feel I can best fill this new position."

Jerry Barr

Democratic candidate Jerry Barr, 30, Route 4, is currently employed as a bookeeper as the Sedalia Veterinary Center. He received a two-year accounting certificate from State Fair Community College and has had bookkeeping training in high school and college. He has studied taxation and accounting at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, and completed a business course at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

He is also a board member of the Bank of Ionia and a former executive for Home Building Corp.

"I don't claim to know it all, because the office of auditor is a new one for the county," Barr said. "But I plan to study and work hard and I won't be afraid to ask for help from Jefferson City if I need it. The office of auditor will be a full-time position and I will perform my duties to the best of my ability," he added.

Urges vote on ballot for judges

Sedalia attorney Earl T. Crawford this week predicted nearly half of Missouri's two million voters will fail to cast a ballot Tuesday for judges serving under the Missouri non-partisan court plan.

In Pettis County, the ballot will have the names of five out of six judges of the Kansas City District Court of Appeals. These judges are not running on a party ticket but on their record, according to Crawford. He said voters usually discard this second ballot, not understanding its meaning.

"Every voter should inform himself concerning the judges record and cast the separate judicial ballot either for or against the retention of the judges listed on it," Crawford said.

The only way for the average person to do this, Crawford said, is to read the report on each judge in Missouri's Official Manual. To offset this problem, lawyers in each district were polled on their opinions of the judges. Crawford is the chairman of the local committee of the Missouri Bar whose duty it is to publicize the results of the poll.

The vote of the attorneys was: Judge David J. Dixon, 1,631 votes for retention and 163 against; Judge Jack P. Pritchard, 1,709 for and 77 against; Judge Ronald L. Somerville, 1,715 for and 79 against; Judge Ben W. Swofford, 1,709 for and 82 against; and Judge Solbert J. Wasserstrom, 1,704 for and 91 against.

The purpose of this type of ballot is to remove judges from the political system and have them stand for re-election solely on their record. Crawford said the system could be applied to any judge of a high court, but for the present only the judges of Missouri's three courts of appeals are on this system.

He said under the political system judges may continue running as long as they wish, but under the non-partisan plan they must retire at age 70.

The shortest dramatic criticism in theatrical history was that attributed to Wolcott Gibbs, writing about the farce "Wham!" He wrote the single word "Ouch!"

Lawsuit shield is requested

KANSAS CITY (AP) — National Bellas Hess, Inc., a mail order and retail department store chain organized in Kansas City, has asked the federal courts to shield it from lawsuits by its creditors while it tries to arrange to pay its debts.

The petition to operate under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Act was filed Tuesday in the U.S. District Court for Southern New York.

National Bellas Hess listed assets of $37.1 million and liabilities of $39.5 million.

It reported a loss of $2.1 million on sales of $131.8 million in the nine months ended April 30 and said it has been unable to refinance $11.4 million in bank loans.

Also covered in the petition are three subsidiaries BELLEX Department Stores, Inc.; NABEX Merchandising, Inc., and NABEX Acceptance Corp. The parent company and its subsidiaries operate 33 large retail department stores throughout the United States under the names of Bellas Hess and GEX Stores.

The petition reported much of the prospective loss for the fiscal year ended July 31 stems from the bankruptcies of three large licensees—ParkviewGem, Inc., of Kansas City; Unishops, Inc., and United Overton Corp. Also a factor, it said, was the retrenchment of another licensee, Gateway Sporting Goods Co., of Kansas City.

Stock in National Bellas Hess sold as high as $11.50 in 1968. The last reported sale was at 15 cents.

Audit has uncovered problems

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — An audit of the intermediate state reformatory at Algoa has uncovered problems there similar to those found at other correctional institutions recently audited, according to State Auditor John Ashcroft.

But Ashcroft said, in releasing the report Tuesday covering a five-year period through June, that Algoa officials have taken steps to correct problems at the facility.

The 24-page report said medical staffing and inspections failed to meet the statutory requirements, recommending legislative action to permit paramedical personnel to conduct the required inspections and the hiring of a part-time physician to work at the institution.

The report also noted that daily journals of inmate infractions and employ complaints have not been maintained as required, although an inmate complaint system was instituted last August.

Recommendations were made concerning a review of meal charges to staff and visitors at the facility, improved accounting controls, better controls on gasoline and other materials, regular property inventories and proper disposition of surplus property.

Port authorities are recommended

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP)—The Missouri Department of Transportation took under advisement Tuesday recommendations for three southeast Missouri port authorities.

The action followed testimony before the transportation department suggesting the establishment of port authorities in Scott and Cape Girardeau counties as well as a southeast regional port authority.

Applications for the three authorities were submitted by Cape Girardeau Prosecuting Attorney A.J. Seier.

A decision concerning the recommendations is scheduled Nov. 12 in Jefferson City, said John Brawley, director of the department.

The most expensive dress ever sold by a Paris couturier was one by Pierre Balmain to a non-European royal personage for $11,250 in 1971.

Body English

Debora Workinger, 21, of Falls Church, Va., shows a variety of traffic direction signals as she works on a Washington construction site. Miss Workinger says that while she may "swear a lot," she does not really get angry at the motorists and enjoys the work except for the 6:30 a.m. starting time. When she is not detailed to traffic direction, she works as a laborer pouring concrete. (AP Wirephoto)

'Shock' is problem with circulation of the blood

NEW YORK (AP) — Medical "shock," the condition into which former President Richard M. Nixon lapsed after his phlebitis operation, means a collapse of blood circulation.

A simple cut on the hand, or even getting a vaccination shot, can cause some people to go into mild shock. They become woozy or even faint.

Emotional states can affect blood circulation, which is one reason for showing pallor or feeling faint.

Nixon's postoperative shock may have been complicated by his reluctance to seek early treatment for his phlebitis, or vein condition, or his own emotional reaction to the Watergate scandal that led to his resignation, one physician says.

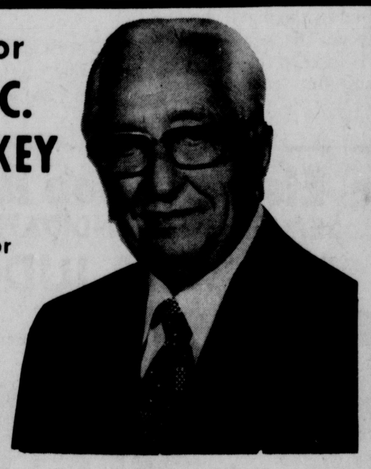

Small arteries, called arterioles, dilate, or expand, thereby losing ability to contract normally to push freshened blood to all parts of the body, including the heart and brain.

Shock can result from accidental injuries, excessive bleeding, excessive manipulation of organs during surgery, or operations on the vascular system. The veinous, or vein system, is particularly sensitive to manipulation surgically. Nixon had a major vein clamped mostly shut.

Further, he apparently had a very extensive series of clots throughout much of his left leg, a pre-existing interference with veinous blood return to the heart.

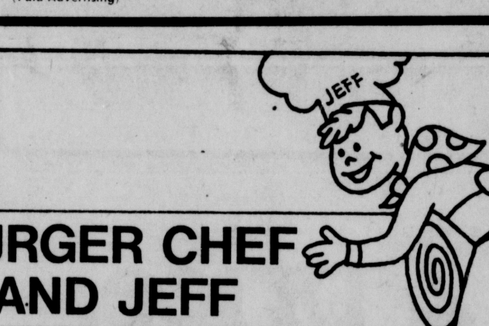

One physician, asked for an opinion about the Nixon case, said, "He was reported not to have been in very good physical condition the night before, and the operation was therefore delayed. But the operation was apparently deemed necessary to avoid life-threatening trouble if a major clot broke loose" and went from the leg to the lungs.

Many fear northern Great Plains might become another Appalachia

The energy bite

The aerial photograph shows strip mining in progress on the open plains of Wyoming four miles north of the Jim Bridger Power Plant, background, where the coal will be burned. The economics of coal are such that it's often more expensive to ship it than mine it. And so dozens of companies want to sprinkle Wyoming, Montana and North Dakota with power plants and coal gasification plants that would burn the fuel near the mines. Then the coal energy would be exported, by wire as electricity and by pipeline as gas. (AP)

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

COLSTRIP, Mont. (AP) — Rancher Wally McRae calls Colstrip his hometown, but he's a stranger here now. The production of energy has made this lonesome corner of "the Big Sky Country" an industrial outpost.

Colstrip, a nearly abandoned railroad town only a few months ago, throbs and rumbles today with the pulsating symphony of industrial man.

Hundreds of construction workers are building a huge power plant to plug distant cities into untapped arteries of coal under the vast plains. The 700-megawatt plant will produce enough electricty for a city of 200,000 people.

Remote valleys echo the thunder of massive machines brought here to savage virgin land for a bonanza of coal.

A picturesque highway winding leisurely through the open hills is jammed with big trucks growling under heavy loads. Wild animals flee. Clean air is suddenly filled with the reek of burning diesel.

The character of Montana, Wyoming and North Dakota, where the coal treasure is buried just below the prairie, has changed for the 1.6 million people who lived here three years ago, when the boom began.

"The isolation and solitude, the open spaces, the community of neighbors — I can see all that going out the window," says Wally McRae. "It's something I had hoped to save for my children. It's important and precious."

McRae operates a 30,000-acre ranch, part of a family empire started when his grandfather bought 160 acres from a fur trapper in 1886. His cousin, Evan McRae, owns 34,000 acres. The coal is less than 200 feet below the rolling grasslands of the two spreads.

Three generations of the family have built a life rooted in respect for this awesome, open prairie; an endless land that makes a man think even God would be lonely here.

That's how McRae and his neighbors feel. Not so the 40,000 or more industrial workers, miners, engineers and others - no one knows exactly how many - who have come to the three states to mine the coal and turn it into energy. In Colstrip, there were 200 people in 1972, and now there are 3,000, mining and building the power plant.

The construction workers cluster in metal ghettos scattered around Colstrip and other boom towns. They overwhelm the schools, crowd the highways and walk upon private land as if it was public sidewalk.

"I guess it's a small thing, but it used to be when you passed someone on the road, you would both wave," says McRae, who is 38. "People were friendly like that around here. But you drive by Colstrip now and nobody waves.

"I went to grade school in Colstrip, but now I don't even feel welcome in my hometown any more. The town is so unsettled, nobody knows anybody.

"There's a lot of wander-on trespassing. They see an empty piece of land and think it's not owned. I've seen thirsty cattle and horses waiting for people to leave a pond so they can get water . . . And there's a lot of poaching. I have less antelope and deer now."

There are hundreds of Wally McRaes in Montana and Wyoming where the incipient Great Plains coal boom has had its greatest impact so far. They are banding together in associations to protect this land. McRae is a founding member of the Rosebud Protective Association. The members give each other moral support in their battle against the mining boom. And the association has a platform to protect the Colstrip area from a list of ills: ecological damage to the land from strip mining, higher school taxes, destruction of game, even damage to Montana's two-lane macadam highways from heavy coal trucks.

The three states have an estimated coal reserve of 260 billion tons. That's enough to generate all the electricity America currently consumes for 300 years. It's the nation's largest single reserve of coal reachable by strip mining. And it's a big percentage of the three trillion tons which the U.S. Bureau of Mines lists as America's total coal reserve.

Coal production in Montana, Wyoming and North Dakota was under 20 million tons in 1972 and it jumped to 40 million in 1973, almost all of it so far in Wyoming and Montana. The U.S. Bureau of Mines says this will increase to 600 million tons by 1985, if plans now proposed by energy companies are carried out. Total U.S. production last year was 600 million tons.

About half of the coal reserve is on federal land controled by the U.S. Department of Interior. The federal government had leased only small parcels when the state governments, especially Montana, began to resist. Now the federal government has agreed not to lease any more land for mining until it completes an environmental impact study early next year.

"Up to now we're defnitely in control," said one state official. But Wally McRae isn't sure. "Anytime the federal government decides cowboys are expendable, they'll move in," he says. "There's just not much you can do."

Most people here liked the vast plains and mountains.

Then the energy crisis changed the economics of northern Great Plains coal.

★ ★ ★

They call themselves "boomers" and they're proud of it. They are the skilled construction workers who bring muscle and know-how to the boom; men who wander the country building power plants, bridges, reservoirs, mines and refineries. They have come here with wives and children to live in hardship among natives who often don't want them.

"You've got to go where the money is," said Rod Savage, a 35-year-old pipefitter from Lewistown, Mont., earning $450 a week in the coal boom.

"At home, I'd be lucky to earn $300 a month. What's the sense of living in a crackerbox house and driving an old car. Here I've got a new car, a new house and money in the bank."

The Savages and their 4-year-old son live in a mobile home that is wedged like a metal sardine among scores of others on a flat plain of sand and sage five unpaved miles from Rock Springs, Wyo.

There's no lawn, trees or park nearby. Dust rises at the faintest breath, coating cars, houses and people and filtering into every room.

Savage is helping build the Jim Bridger electric power plant, an $800 million, 2,000-megawatt complex that will burn Wyoming coal, enough for a city of half-a-million, like Seattle. To reach the plant, he must commute 80 miles a day.

Boomers in Colstrip feel even more isolated. The nearest doctor or supermarket or department store or movie is 40 miles away. Children often play on a gravel-topped road, dodging 10-ton trucks.

"You have to draw on inner resources to endure here," said Mrs. Clarence McMurtrey, the 29-year-old wife of a pipefitter from California. Her husband is helping build the Colstrip Power Plant. They live in a 22-foot motor home with their three children.

★ ★ ★

The economics of coal is such that it's often more expensive to ship than to mine. As a result, industry, until recently, had little interest in going West to tap coal deposits, no matter how rich.

Eastern and Appalachian deposits were more than ample for the early American industrial machine and interest in even that waned in the postwar era when cheap oil and gas became the fuel of convenience.

Environmental concern and the energy shortage changed the picture.

Montana, Wyoming and North Dakota have 23 billion tons of low-sulphur coal. It can be burned so cleanly that utility companies using it can easily meet clean air standards effective next July.

There's enough of the low-sulphur fuel in the three states to generate all the nation's current electricity consumption for 30 years. And strip mining is so easy the coal can be shipped 1,000 miles and still be cheaper than deep-mined Eastern coal, whose cost is rising.

Wyoming has seven mines operating now, producing 18.6 million tons a year. Six Montana mines produced about 40 milion tons last year. North Dakota has four strip mines, and output is small. A number of proposals have been made to start major production in that state.

Strip mine vanguard

A 70-cubic yard coal stripping unit towers over a work area near the Jim Bridger Power Plant in Wyoming, east of Rock Springs. It's in the vanguard of the army of massive machines preparing to march into the Northern Great Plains to mine the riches beneath the virgin land. The boom that is just beginning is a controversial issue. To some, it's a threat to their peaceful way of life; to others, it's a promise, a new opportunity. (AP)

Coal economics make it most attractive of all to burn the fuel near the mine. As a result, $2 billion now is being invested in plants, machinery and facilities. Energy from the coal will be exported by wire, as electricity, and by pipeline, as synthetic gas.

A century ago, Indians battled to save this western country for themselves. Now the three states formed after the Indians lost find themselves in a similar battle.

"We are part of the United States and we rely on other states for things we consume every day," says Montana's Gov. Thomas L. Judge. "We have a responsibility to the rest of the country to share our resources, but I don't believe that goes to the point of ruining a state or changing the entire life-style of a people."

"We've got to have something to export besides our college graduates," said Jack Jones, a Wyoming legislator. "But we don't have to make a damn junkyard out of Wyoming to keep air conditioners running in Chicago or Seattle."

Coal frontier

An 18-cubic-yard unit scoops coal from a strip mining operation near the Jim Bridger Power Plant, 35 miles east of Rock Springs, Wyo. Beyond stretch the wide horizons of "The Big Sky Country," the once empty Northern Great Plains of Montana, Wyoming and North Dakota, which are now the industrial frontier of the coal boom. The lure is the huge coal reserves underlying much of the plains, an estimated 2 3 billion tons of easily strip-mined, low-sulphur fuel. (AP)

Hormone helps youth attain greater height

NEWINGTON, Conn. (AP) — At the age of 20, Rick Lindahl of Manchester stands 5 feet 2¾ inches. His final height is the result of hormone injections, not of normal male growth patterns.

When he was 5 years old Rick, a victim of growth hormone deficiency and half the size he should have been for his age, remembers being trapped in a phone booth, too short to open the door and escape.

"He couldn't get out, and no one could see him in there. He was just petrified because nobody could see him," said his mother, Margaret.

Rick would be a midget today if it weren't for growth-hormone treatments he received for nearly 10 years at Newington Children's Hospital.

Rick started hormone injections when he was 10 after being diagnosed in Boston as having growth-hormone deficiency. At that time he was 45 inches tall, the height of an average 6-year-old and growing less than one inch a year.

He was classified by doctors at the hospital as "no growth." When hormone injections were stopped last year, he measured 62½ inches tall.

"Without treatment he probably would have grown to be about 55 inches. So we gave him 7½ inches over and above what we would have expected him to grow," said Dr. Frederick J. Glynn Jr., Newington's clinical director of pediatrics. "Our aim is to get a person to five feet, a comfortable height."

Rick was one of the first cases treated for growth hormone deficiency in New England. Since the hospital opened its endocrinology clinic in 1964, 30 other children have been treated.

Hormone injections must be completed before a patient's bones fuse during his teens or early 20s and he stops growing.

Each child receives three hormone injections a week made from human pituitary glands. Because each gland used in making the hormone is obtained after a person's death through a donation to medical science, its availability is limited and classified by the federal government as a "restricted drug."

"There is roughly half as much growth hormone available in this country as there are children needing it," said Dr. Raymond Hintz, a University of Connecticut endocrinologist.

Preparing to return to college to specialize in art, Rick said his shortness never became a psychological problem.

"It's just something you learn to cope with. You learn to cope with frustration; you learn to accept the fact you can't do certain things. You don't really overcome being short; you simply adapt."

Mills can still smile, despite the Tidal Basin incident

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — His trembling hands grip the lectern, his face reddens and perspiration glistens in the blaze of news camera lights, but Wilbur D. Mills still can smile.

The 18-term congressman has been intently observed, but only superficially questioned. It appears that he has laughed, joked and apologized his way through whatever political danger may have been posed by the Tidal Basin incident involving a former exotic dancer once billed as "the Argentine Firecracker."

Mills' manner seems akin to that of a youngster caught dipping into the cookie jar, not conceding any crime of consequence, but sheepish about it, nonetheless.

High school students at Conway grilled him about the incident and hooted at some of his answers, until Mills said he wasn't going to talk about it any more.

Most others—generally older, civic-club members—have listened politely to economic talks, then applauded Mills, who has been campaigning here for the past two weeks.

"I have been embarrassed beyond words," Mills said at his first post-incident gathering in Arkansas. He appeared before the Little Rock Jaycees, who wisecracked among themselves about the Tidal Basin incident until Mills arrived. Then they applauded and laughed with the congressman.

Mills jokingly spoke of the perils of taking out foreign women who like champagne. He said his marriage was untroubled. He apologized. He said he had quaffed bubbly, but done nothing more serious.

While the Tidal Basin incident has provided a lot of gossip in Mills' district, most political analysts believe he was hurt more by reports of illegal contributions to his 1972 re-election campaign.

As chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, the 65-year-old Democrat also could be hurt by inflation and the tax bite.

Still, he is expected to defeat his Republican opponent, Judy Petty, 30. But his victory margin in Little Rock's 2nd District could be narrower than in the past. Mills has represented the district since 1938.

The Tidal Basin incident involved shapely, 38-year-old Annabel Battistella, a former stripper from Argentina. She left Mills' car and jumped into the Tidal Basin near Washington's Jefferson Memorial after park police stopped the congressman's car 2 a.m. Oct. 7.

Mrs. Battistella was a resident of the apartment building where Mills lives. Her husband lives in Argentina.

Mills, Mrs. Battistella and two other women were in the congressman's car, driven by Albert Capaldi, when the police stopped it for operating without lights and for speeding.

Police said Mills smelled of alcohol and bled from face cuts. Mills later said he was cut when Mrs. Battistella's elbow hit his glasses as he tried to stop her from leaping from the car.

In a statement, Mills said he was with the group because he was giving a bon voyage party for Gloria Sanchez, a cousin of the Battistellas. Mrs. Sanchez was going to return to Argentina.

During the party, Mrs. Battistella became ill, the statement said. Mills said he, Capaldi and the other women were taking Mrs. Battistella home when police stopped the car.

The congressman's wife, Polly, 67, was not with them. The statement said a broken foot kept her at home, but that she insisted Mills take the others to a night spot.

Newsmen have asked Mills' aides—they have not been able to get to Mills—how the congressman could be unaware of a number of details about the way he spent the evening of Oct. 6 and the early morning hours of Oct. 7. They said they don't know.

Mrs. Battistella reportedly suffered two black eyes in the incident. Mills said he didn't know how that happened. He said that perhaps it occurred in some perfectly understandable way during her rescue.

He has denied any romantic link with Mrs. Battistella. Her husband, like Mills, says the two families were simply friends. But Eduardo Battistella also said his wife was on Mills' personal payroll, at $500 a month, for a time. Mills denies that. "I don't have that kind of money," he said.

In a prepared statement, she noted that Mills described himself as a man of "modest means," but had written a $15,000 personal check last year to Gulf Oil Corp. to pay back a donation illegally made to a "draft Mills" group in connection with Mills' 1972 race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Statute permits outlaw designation

By ROBERT H. REID

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Recalling the days of posses and vigilantes, North Carolina maintains a statute which in effect deputizes the citizenry and allows officers to shoot designated felons on sight.

The statute, enacted in 1866, empowers judges to declare felony fugitives outlaws. Once a person has been declared an outlaw, he is subject to arrest by any citizen. If the outlaw refuses an arrest warning, any citizen "may slay him without accusation or impeachment of any crime."

State officials say they cannot determine how many persons have been declared outlaws in modern times, although the statute has been used against four men in the last six months.

There is no record of a modern outlaw ever being shot by a citizen, officials say.

In one of the latest instances, a 19-year-old youth facing 65 years imprisonment for various robbery convictions was declared an outlaw after he escaped from a Fayetteville jail.

Law officers who have sought outlaw status for felons say they do not expect private citizens to go after criminals like posses of old.

"It's not a hunting license," said Burley Mitchell, district attorney of Wake County. "If a felon flees, law enforcement officers cannot shoot him unless the officer determines he's in immediate danger. . .Now if he becomes an outlaw, the law enforcement officers or any private citizen can shoot him. What it really does is deputizes the citizenry and gives law enforcement officers more authority."

The statute does not empower officers or private citizens to lie in ambush for an outlaw. In a turn-of-the-century decision, the North Carolina Supreme Court determined that outlaws must be "called upon and warned to surrender before they are allowed to be slain."

The statute itself gives wide latitude to judges in labeling felons as outlaws. Any judge of the state Supreme Court, Superior Court "or any criminal court," or any two justices of the peace, need only "to receive information that a felony has been committed. . and that such a person flees from justice" to make an outlaw declaration.

A felony suspect may be declared an outlaw before he has actually been convicted, provided a judge deems that his guilt or potential danger appear convincing. Last April two prisoners who escaped from a Rockingham County jail while awaiting trial for murder were declared outlaws.

Mitchell, who has recently asked a judge to declare a 22-year-old man an outlaw, said he took the action to scare the fugitive into surrendering. The Wake County sheriff's department quoted the young man, who was charged with rape and armed robbery, as saying he would never be captured alive.

A few hours after being declared an outlaw, he meekly turned himself in to authorities.

Need for levy hike by county library

County residents living outside Sedalia will have another opportunity Tuesday to vote on a modest levy increase for the Pettis County Library. The levy has failed twice before, once in 1971 and again in the August primary.

The ballot calls for a 5-cent increase in the levy, boosting it from 10 cents on the $100 assessed valuation to 15 cents. The two other counties in the Boonslick Regional Library District — Cooper and Benton — already levy 15 cents, Cooper for the last 10 years and Benton beginning in January, as a result of its affirmative vote last August.

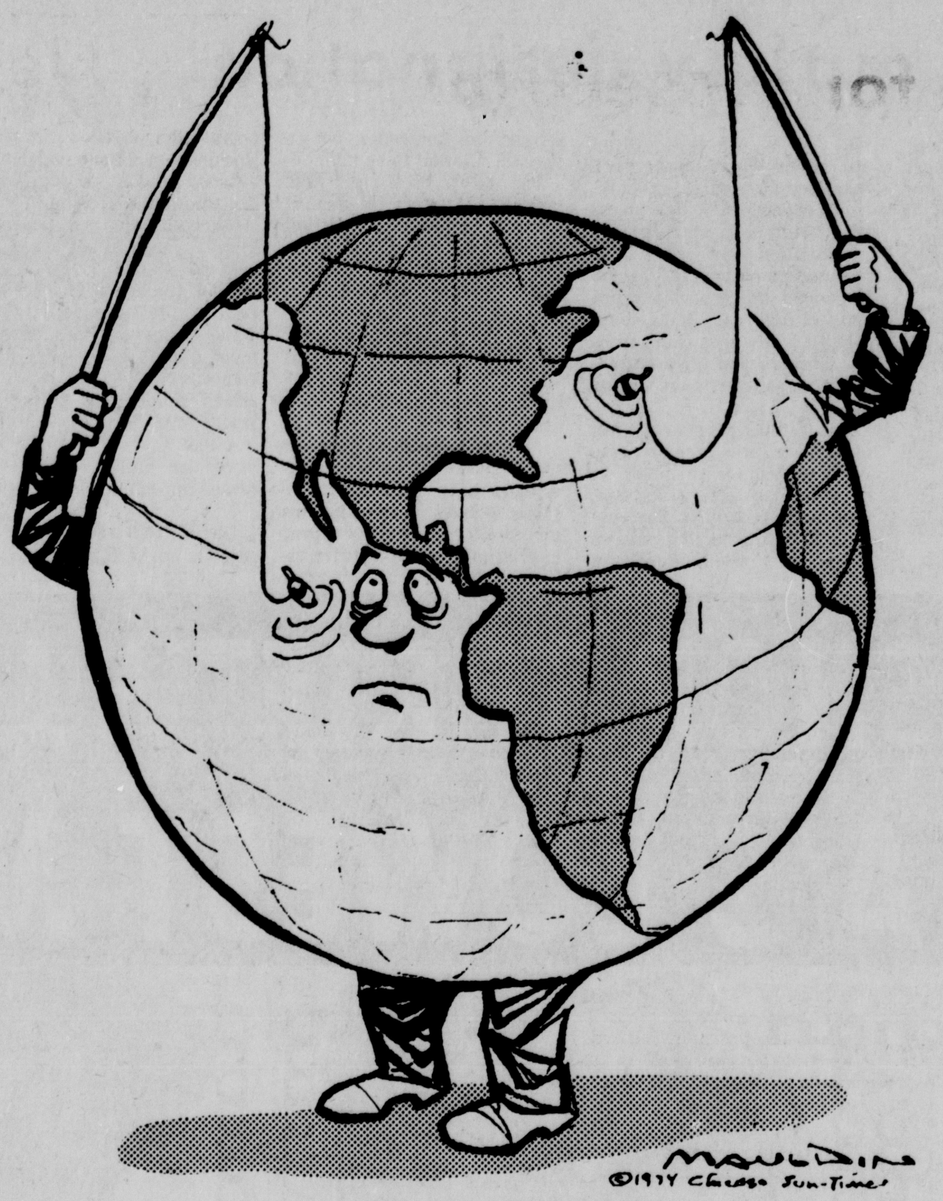

Each county's levy goes together into a district budget, drawn up by the 15-member board that governs the library district (five from each county). This permits more economical purchasing, maintenance of bookmobile service, staff training, etc.

Since the district is a cooperative venture of three counties, it is not supported by a district-wide levy. Instead it is up to each county to provide its fair share. This Pettis County has not been doing, although the Sedalia branch accounts for the lion's share of services among the four district branches.

The Pettis County tax has been 10 cents for the past 22 years. Since that time, inflation has taken a high toll; the library estimates that its book-purchasing power has been cut 20 per cent in the last year alone. The library came under the minimum wage law this spring, another factor that has boosted costs considerably with no increase in income. The elimination of the Missouri intangibles tax is another blow to the library, costing the district about $8,000 a year in revenue.

Eventually, all of this will be reflected in a cut in services — perhaps to the eight Pettis County rural schools the library serves; maybe in bookmobile services; perhaps in book and magazine purchases and the overall quality of the library.

An affirmative vote on the levy in Tuesday's election will enable Pettis County to carry its share of this load and help insure that the county library continues to provide the services its patrons have come to expect.

Three bureaucrats bilk the taxpayers

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Three top government officials charged the taxpayers for a California vacation this year after a government contractor had already picked up the bills.

The high-living trio reached at least one official decision between sunning and sipping at Palm Springs, Calif. They extended their host's million-dollar contract.

Not long afterward, one of the officials financed a salmon-fishing trip in Alaska with federal funds.

The woolly tale began with the contract award to Grey Advertising, a prestigious New York firm, to promote the government's alcohol abuse program.

The three men responsible for the million-dollar contract were top officials of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism — its director Dr. Morris Chafetz, his deputy Kenneth Eaton and public affairs head Harry Bell.

When the contract came up for renewal this March, the three officials arranged to hold their negotiations in balmy Palm Springs near the vacation home of a top company executive.

Naturally, Dr. Chafetz didn't want to travel second-class to such a fashionable place. So he wangled first-class tickets from the government, claiming leg ailments. In the past, the leg trouble hasn't kept him from playing tennis or shooting the slopes on skis. The other two officials also flew in luxury so they could travel with their boss.

At Palm Springs' soignee Tennis Club, the trio and their wives settled into $32-a-night rooms. They billed the government the maximum $25 a day for the five-day stay.

They neglected to mention in their expense accounts, however, that their bills had already been paid by the New York advertising firm's subsidiary, Grey-North. The total tab, counting the expenses of the advertising executives, came to $2,541.69.

Of course, the advertising firm charged off the $2,541.69 against its government contract. Thus, the taxpayers would up paying twice for the three officials' California vacation.

A few days after they left Palm Springs, the officials renewed the million-dollar contract. As far as we would determine, the firm is doing a good job.

The following July, one of the vacationers, Harry Bell, chartered a pontoon airplane in Alaska and took Grey-North Vice President Fred Kline and other business friends on a salmon-fishing trip.

Bell submitted an official travel request for transportation from Anchorage to Tyonek village on July 27, 1974. We have learned that he actually flew to Bulchitna Lake to fish.

The following day, he made a travel request from Anchorage to Kenai, although he actually took another fishing trip to Mull Lake. The taxpayers were stuck for $595 for these fishing expenditions. It was an unhappy experience for Bell; he caught only one salmon.

The three officials, Chafetz, Eaton and Bell, called the double billing a mistake. They did not intend to cheat the government, they told us. Chafetz pointed out that he could increase his income 500 per cent by leaving the government and practicing private psychiatry. All three vehemently denied that the favors from Grey-North affected their decision to renew the company's million-dollar contract.

Commenting on the Alaska fishing trip, Bell said official business had been discussed while they flew and fished. This was confirmed by advertising executive Kline, who said he was unaware federal funds had been used to charter the plane.

Kline conceded that Grey-North had picked up the bills at Palm Springs but said this was provided for in the contract.

CIA PLANT: Despite the sensitivity of U.S.-China relations, the Central Intelligence Agency has quietly placed an operative in the U.S. mission in Peking. He is James R. Lilley, a "political officer" who has also served in Cambodia, Thailand and Laos.

This is but one of the explosive revelations in a soon-to-be published Washington Monthly article by investigative journalist John Marks, co-author of "The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence." Marks, now an associate of the Center for National Security Studies, also makes these disclosures:

✔Over a fourth of the 5,435 State Department employes who work overseas are actually undercover CIA agents, and the number is steadily rising.

✔The Senate Foreign Relations Committee routinely approves the appointment to sensitive posts of Foreign Service reserve officers who are in reality CIA agents. Of the 121 names submitted to the committee last year, 70 were spooks.

STRANGE FANTASY: Rep. Frank Denholm, D-S.D., has a vivid imagination.

A tape has just reached us of his recent remarks before a South Dakota audience. "Jack Anderson is a personal friend of mine," said Denholm. "He called me and said, 'I've got to find something on you. I've got to do this on every member of Congress before election day.'

"I said, 'Jack, I don't know anything, but if you can find something, go ahead and write it,'" the congressman continued. "Well, he came back the second day and said, 'The only thing I know of is that trip you took to Venezuela. It looks like it was paid for by the Venezuelan government.'"

The alleged conversation between Denholm and myself is pure fantasy. My associate Bob Owens, in checking out the Venezuelan junket, asked the congressman a number of specific questions about his trip to Venezuela. Denholm refused to answer.

Politics clouds truth on economy

WASHINGTON — Some lucky Americans can still cope with this business of paying 50 cents for a pound of sugar, a dollar for a pound of hotdogs, a dollar sixty for a pound of rump roast.

But can anybody stomach the babel of confusion we're getting from government about what's wrong with the economy?

President Ford tells a press conference that this country is not in a recession. Federal Reserve chairman Arthur Burns says we are in a recession.

The stock market starts another dive because of what analysts call "mounting fear of a severe recession." But Treasury Secretary William E. Simon warns a New York audience that inflation, not recession, is the nation's biggest economic problem. He says that any attempt to "stimulate economic activity now would intensify rather than solve our problems."

Almost simultaneously, Paul W. McCracken, an advisory to Mr. Ford and former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, was telling Washington newsmen that inflationary pressures already are easing, that the U.S. is in a recession and that the Ford administration would be "ill-advised" not to admit it.

Some critics are asking why President Ford is running around the country making political speeches instead of staying in Washington to deal with the nation's economic woes. If I had to face that cacophony of conflicting, confusing advise, I'd leave town too.

Except there isn't much friendly territory left for a President to visit these days. General Motors announces that it is cutting back production at four assembly plants, putting at least 6,000 employes out of work indefinitely. Similar layoffs and plant closings are scheduled by Ford Motor Company and Chrysler Corp. Chrysler officials have warned of a deep recession and publicly criticized President Ford for urging Americans to buy less.

Simon's comment that inflation is still the number one problem may please economic theorists who are still receiving regular paychecks, but it will not go down well with people who are losing their jobs; with builders who are going bankrupt; with auto dealers who face financial disaster.

The economic mess seems hopelessly complicated when the economists talk their mumbo-jumbo. But it is a simple matter to those vast thousands who are losing their jobs. They would rather have their paychecks and shell out $1.50 for a pound of hotdogs than be unemployed for months and see hotdogs drop to 50 cents a pound.

One problem is that no matter how honest a new administration intends to be, in election years the truth becomes hostage to politics. With predictions of a Democratic landslide all around him, Mr. Ford seems to have decided that it would be bad politics to say to Americans, "Yes, we're in a recession, and if we aren't careful it could get a lot worse."

But just you wait until after the Nov. 5 elections when the truth no longer will be hostage. Not only will the White House admit we have a recession of some magnitude, but Mr. Ford is likely to spring some economic proposals that are sharply different from those of a couple of weeks ago.

Whatever he says and proposes, let us pray that he says it loudly enough to drown out the babble of contradictions coming from his so-called economic experts.

U.S. falls short on leadership

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON — If U.S. prestige is declining in the world, it's our own doing.

Cromley

For whever one looks, influential leaders behind the scenes are urgently begging this country to take over leadership. This is true in Japan, West Germany, Britain, Italy, Egypt, Israel and the Middle East, much of Latin America and in some of Africa.

Statesmen from London to Bonn to Rome have made clear that if the U.S. economy falters badly, West Europe will go down. The Japanese echo this concern. Equivalent messages come in from much of the underdeveloped world. A new piece of research illustrates with astounding clarity the heavy economic dependence of the non-industrialized nations on the American market, technology and leadership.

A series of reports attest to the fact that major Arab nations, beginning with Saudi Arabia, are more confident in the U.S. future than in that of any other nation. This is evidenced by the growing number of Arab investments in the United States, by the deposit of Arab funds in American banks and the growing desire of Arab governments to secure the services of American technology. Since most of the oil-rich lands will be dependent on these investments when their petroleum resources are depleted, the Arabs obviously are tying their economic future to that of the United States. Therefore, other nations wishing to share in the petrodollar pool, apparently will need to borrow through American banks.

For the time being at least, the Chinese fear the Russians and the Russians the Chinese. Both thus need this country. Which major country, other than the United States can be trusted by both the Israeli and the Egyptians? Without U.S. approval what sort of an arms or force reduction arrangement can be worked out between the Soviet Union and West Europe? Without the U.S. nuclear umbrella and American trade and technology, Japan would face a far less rosy future.

The problem is not lack of influence. It is rather indecisiveness in the White House, the State Department and in Congress. This country today has no foreign policy, no Mideast policy, no West European policy, no Asian policy and no Russian or Chinese policies. It has no worldwide policy on oil or energy, foreign investment, inflation, the recycling of petrodollars, arms control or defense. Policies worked up in one department or another are negated by policies developed in other departments.

We make dramatic moves without planning or preparation. These confuse, annoy and frequently anger our allies and tempt our opponents to rash actions inimical to our interests.

With no visible counter action in hand, President Ford and Secretary of State Kissinger speak out strongly against those nations which are boosting oil prices beyond all reason, leaving friends with mouth's agape and arousing scorn among the oil producers.

West European leaders were visibly annoyed when Kissinger, with much ado, invited the Big Five in to develop an oil-inflation-energy program — with no plan in mind and no idea of what the United States wants or is planning.

Adroit diplomatic agreements, breakthrough talks with China and Russia and tightrope negotiations to avoid war in the Middle East and Cyprus are great achievements. They do not constitute a policy which should be a standard around which friends can rally and a symbol of determination which will give pause to enemies.

Today's thoughts

"Today we are afraid of simple words like goodness and mercy and kindness. We don't believe in the good old words because we don't believe in the good old values anymore. And that is why the world is so sick." — Lin Yutang, Chinese philosopher.

What is my strength, that I should wait? And what is my end, that I should be patient?" — Job 6:11.

About 75 per cent of the fallen trees were also found to have extreme fungus decay.

Candidates for prosecutor

State statutes say the prosecuting attorney of a county is responsible for prosecuting all criminal cases brought to his attention and also acts as legal counsel to county officials. Prosecutor Gary Fleming, a Democrat, and Kenneth Romines, Republican, are running for the office in Tuesday election.

Gary Fleming

Fleming, 27, lives at 2515 Wing with his wife, Ann. He is a 1965 graduate of Smith-Cotton High School, took his B.A. degree from Southeast Missouri State University, Cape Girardeau, and his law degree from Washington University, St. Louis, in 1971. He is a member of the First Baptist Church.

Fleming was elected Democratic prosecuting attorney of Pettis County two years ago, and before that was assistant prosecutor for eight months.

During his term, Fleming has tried eight cases before a jury — "probably more than any prosecutor has tried in the last 20 years," he said. He got four convictions, lost two and, got a hung jury on one and saw one convicted felon win a new trial.

"Some of these were good, strong cases, some weren't strong cases," said Fleming. "You can be doing your job and still lose cases; it might just be an indication you are willing to take a chance."

Fleming requested the grand jury that is presently sitting in Pettis County, the first since 1961, which he considers another positive move. He said he has also cooperated with all law enforcement agencies in the county and has improved his office's relations with the police department.

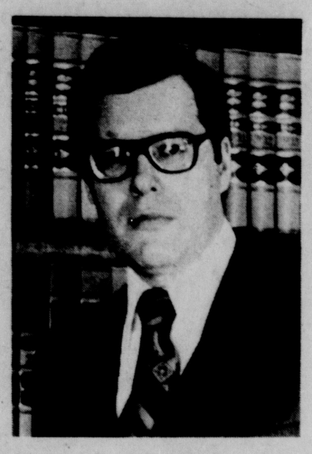

"There's no one type case I would say is more important than any other," said Fleming. "You have to look at each case on the basis of the facts and what you can do for each case."

Fleming said he has worked especially hard to cut down on the number of bad check cases. "We've stopped some . . . we've taken them out of circulation," he said of bad check artists.

Drug abuse is "a major problem" in the county, said Fleming, who called undercover agents the best method of combating the crime, as contrasted to making arrests for possession. He said delays in getting laboratory results on seized drugs from Jefferson City is a amjor problem.

When possible, Fleming said he tried to "straighten out" youths caught in burglary and robbery incidents. "You will have accomplished something and have stopped future . . . problems," he said.

"I feel I've done a good job, at least I know I've worked on it," said Fleming in summary.

Ken Romines

Romines, 32, Fleming's Republican challenger, lives at 624 West Seventh with his wife, Jane, and daughters Elizabeth, 4, and Katherine, 9 weeks. He is a member of Broadway Presbyterian Church.

Romines took his A.B. degree from William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo., and his law degree from the University of Mississippi.

He was a clerk for the Mississippi Supreme Court and the U.S. Attorney in Mississippi, each for one term, coming to Sedalia in March of 1973 to enter private practice he was an assistant attorney general for Missouri in the criminal trial division for four years.

The prosecuting attorney's most important function is to "aggressively pursue, try, and obtain convictions of people charged with crimes," Romines said. He said he considers it important "to create an atmosphere where people know if they anticipate doing anything illegal that (1) the law enforcement officials will catch them; (2) the prosecutor will put them in jail."

Romines said as prosecutor he would crack down on illegal firearms on the North Side. "To the extent we can find out who these people are, they will be put in jail," he stated. He also called for stronger measures against people who write bad checks and shoplift, saying the latter "costs everyone money." "More types" of cases would be filed under his direction, Romines said.

In the area of drug abuse, Romines said he would contact the State Highway Patrol about "why we are having to wait six months" for results from that lab. He said he would investigate the possibility of setting up a local lab to analyze seized drugs.

"Since I've been here I've seen certain types of criminal cases, and I don't want my kids growing up in this kind of environment," he added.

"If I wasn't concerned about the job I wouldn't run for it," Romines said in summary.

Financier and secretary robbed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — M. J. Coen, 57, a Kansas City financier, and his secretary were robbed Tuesday night of cash and jewelry they valued at nearly $40,000, police said.

Coen reportedly was escorting Mrs. Delores Pence, 40, from his car in the basement garage of the downtown Hilton Inn when they were accosted by two men armed with a hand gun and a shotgun. Mrs. Pence told police the men took a 5.5 carat diamond ring from her valued at $35,000.

Coen, who said he lost about $2,000 in cash, is president of Midland Securities, Inc.

New fertilizer projections

Farm roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department expert says world fertilizer production by 1980 could exceed the estimates of six months ago if new plants currently planned are put into operation.

Richard D. Reidinger, of the department's Economic Research Service, said world output of nitrogen — the ingredient in shortest supply — could exceed use by as much as 5.2 million metric tons in 1980 if plants now on drawing boards are operating.

The new fertilizer projections were included in a report published Tuesday by USDA. Last March the agency said world nitrogen production by 1980 could fall short of need by 3.9 million to 9.6 million tons.

Projections made by the World Bank last spring showed a similar deficit by 1980. But Reidinger's report said more recent developments have significantly altered those estimates.

"High prices have stimulated what appears to be a very massive response involving expanded fertilizer plant facilities," Reidinger told a reporter. "It isn't going to help today or tomorrow, but within a few years — if these plans turn out — it could mean a significant difference."

Much of the new production capacity, Reidinger said in his report, will be in the Peoples Republic of China, North America, Western Europe and in the less developed countries themselves.

New plants also have been contracted for in the Soviet Union and are expected to provide that country and Eastern Europe with a substantial nitrogen surplus by 1980 instead of the deficit projected earlier.

Oil-rich countries in the Middle East also appear to be expanding nitrogen production from natural gas at a larger rate than indicated previously, Reidinger said.

Chase results in death

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP)— A wild chase through southern Leavenworth County and Kansas City, Kan., ended in the death of a man being sought for the burglary of a Basehor grocery store early today, police said.

The victim was identified as William Fox, who was believed to be from Missouri. Authorities said he was shot as he drove through the last of three roadblocks, but it was not immediately known if he was killed by the gunshot or in the wreck of his car.

Police said there were no other injuries.

Two alleged accomplices were arrested at the rear of the grocery store, where the sheriff's office said they were preparing to load 300 cartons of cigarettes, three cash registers and other items into their car.

Deputies said when they arrived at the store they fired warning shots in an attempt to keep the three men from fleeing. The man who later died got away in the car, however, leaving the other two men behind.

The Leavenworth County sheriff's office said none of the men fired shots at officers. An earlier report said there had been an exchange of gunfire at the grocery store.

Police said the suspect ran through a roadblock and hit two police cars before the right front tire of his car was shot out. The suspect kept the car moving, however, and ran through two more roadblocks.

Police said the driver of the car tried to run down several Kansas City, Kan., officers who were out of their cars at the last roadblock. He drove about 12 more blocks, where he lost control of the car, overturned and struck an embankment, police said.

The victim was unconscious after the crash and was rushed to a hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Halt to oil, gas program shares ordered

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Solicitation for sales of shares in a New Mexico oil and gas program has been ordered halted by Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick.

Kirkpatrick issued the order, affecting only Missouri, Tuesday, calling on the Olympic Petroleum Corp. of Texas to report all past sales in Missouri and furnish pertinent books and records.

Kirkpatrick said the corporation, its president and sole shareholder W.R. Cook, and two affiliates—the Alliance Energy Corp. and the Olympic Energy Corp, both of Dallas—have not registered with his office under the state uniform securities act.

Finger loss suit against Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP)—A damage suit has been filed against Springfield on behalf of a 3-year-old boy, whose mother maintains he lost a finger at the zoo here because of negligence by the city.

The suit, filed Tuesday in Greene County Circuit Court, says Roger Lance Martin's finger was bitten off by an Australian donkey at the city zoo last June 12. Mrs. Sherry Martin charges the city was negligent by failing to provide adequate fencing around the animal and by not placing signs at the exhibit indicating the donkey might be dangerous.

Sheriff Emmett Fairfax says Gary Fleming has tried more cases more successfully than any prosecutor during his tenure as sheriff.

Going . . . going . . . gone

Muhammed Ali lands a solid right to the head of heavyweight champion George Foreman (left) in the seventh round of Tuesday night's title bout in Kinshasa, Zaire. In the right picture, Ali, who became only the second heavyweight in the history of boxing to regain the title, watches Foreman tumble to the canvas in the eighth round after Ali delivered his knockout punch to win the fight.

Muhammad Ali knocks out Foreman in 8 to regain heavyweight boxing crown

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — "Ali, Ali, Ali."

The salute thundered from close to 50,000 African throats and echoed around the world today.

Muhammad Ali is back as the undisputed heavyweight champion of the world, knockout conqueror in 2:58 of the eighth round of young and strong George Foreman, who until this dark night was rated one of the most devastating punchers the game has ever seen.

Ali said he would do it — and he did.

And he is a man who must be reckoned with although he is now 32 and well past his fighting prime. Friends say he would be wise now to retire in all his glory and arrogance.

"Now they'll have to pay me $20 million to fight," he boasted. They may, too. Waiting in the wings is the rugged Joe Frazier, former champion, who beat Ali in one slambang brawl and lost to him in another.

"Foreman fought a stupid fight," said Frazier, who sat at the ringside in the vast Stadium of the 20th of May to watch the spectacle in the early hours of the African morning.

"He should never have let Ali play him on the ropes as he did," said Frazier. "I have learned a lot. I want another shot at him. I'm ready when he is. I am sure I can win the next time."

Foreman, 25, a massive and sullen but pleasant man with fists that in five years of pro fighting have exploded 37 knockouts, insists that he also is waiting in line.

"The next time — and I hope there is a next time — I hope to fight a smarter fight," he said. "I hope to follow (manager) Dick Sadler's instructions better."

The 220-pound Foreman sought to demolish Ali the way the had crushed 37 of his pro foes, most of them almost before they had finished tying on their gloves. But Ali beat him at his own game, and was convincing in doing it.

And now it is Frazier who appears to have the next crack in this game of musical chairs among three black American fighters — Ali, Frazier and Foreman. Their only potential threats on the horizon are Teofilo Stevenson, a Cuban giant whom Fidel Castro may not permit to leave home, and Duane Bobick, an American Olympian like Ali and Foreman who is now unbeaten as a pro.

But the next big match would have to be the "rubber" duel between Frazier and Ali.

As champion, he now is in his element. He has a stage. He can reel off his two-line poems.

"I told you he was no good. I showed you," Ali said afterward in the dressing room. "He's slow and awkward. I'm not sure he deserves to fight me again. He would have no chance."

Across the catycombs of the open-air soccer stadium, big George, never before beaten or knocked out, and his associates sat in thickening gloom.

"You can't badmouth a man who beats you," Foreman said solemnly, his voice hoarse and almost a whisper. "He is a true champion. He deserves everybody's respect. He is a credit to his family, his race and to boxing."

Foreman, more or less, agreed with Frazier and Ali that he fought a stupid fight. But he said:

"He won the fight, but I cannot admit he beat me. Nobody loses in a fight like this," for which each of the fighters got a record $5 million.

It was a good fight, two muscled men hammering away at each other as if they were swinging telephone poles. But Ali was the smarter and the better man, and from the fifth round on it became a matter of when Foreman's trunk-like legs would fold.

Ali taunted Foreman during the playing of both the American and Zaire national anthems, and he continued to spit insult at the champion in the fast-paced early rounds.

Then in the eighth, the inevitable happened. Already staggering and unsure of his footing and merely swinging at air, Foreman got caught by an Ali right as Ali slipped out of a clinch.

Foreman veered unsteadily. Ali, sensing the kill, added a left and followed it with a vicious right.

Foreman, seemingly dazed, went down and took the count of 10 from referee Zack Clayton before he could regain his feet.

Oddly enough 1-7 Tigers lead football statistics

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

Call it unbelievable. Say it just can't be. Term it any way you please, but it is true. Sedalia Smith-Cotton's football Tigers, who have won only one of their first eight games, continue to lead their opponents in the major offensive catagories.

The Tigers have rushed for more yardage, passed for more yardage giving them the overall total yardage lead over their first eight foes.

On the ground,, the Tigers have rushed for 1,393 yards on 306 carries. Their opponents have picked up 1,343 on 341 carries.

Through the air, Smith-Cotton has 605 total yards, compared to 522 for their opponents.

With statistics like these, it's hard to believe that a team could be 1-7.

Another statistic that makes it hard to believe is the number of offensive plays S-C and their opponents have tried. Although the opponents hold the edge, it's only a slim one, 418-403.

On the brighter side, Marvin Spruell, the Tigers leading rusher, needs 168 yards in S-C's final two games of the season, to reach the 1,000-mark.

If he succeeds, he would be the first to do so in many, many moons. No one knows for sure, since accurate statistics are not available except for the last five years.

Spruell needs only 26 yards to pass last year's rushing leader Dane Henningsen, now laboring for Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg. Henningsen picked up 857 in 1973. Other recent team rushing leaders for the Tigers include Tom Bloess 576 (1972), Derrick Crank 798 (1971) and the late Rick Boggs 688 (1970).

Spruell's quick cuts and strong second efforts have netted him an average of 7.2 yards per carry in his 116 attempts.

Spruell has picked up an additional 149 yards on 11 pass receptions, and is the team scoring leader with 36 points.

Calls Foreman 'phony champ'

Champion has no kind words

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — The winner fumed and complained, and looked as angry as a vindicated man can when he's proved his own rightness with a vengeful hand.

The loser talked gently, mildly, reasonably.

The roles were old ad wouldn't have been reversed if the verdict had been different.

Recrowned champion . . .
. . . Muhammad Ali

Muhammad Ali, champion again, couldn't find anything nice to say about George Foreman. And Foreman couldn't dig up anything mean to say against Ali.

No skill, scared, doesn't like to get hit, a phony champ who punches like a sissy, a bully who was built up by know-nothing writers — Ali had those words to describe Foreman. And these:

"He was scared; he was humiliated. I did it. I said I'd do it, but did you listen? I said I'd stick him and that he didn't like to get hit and that I'm the greatest heavyweight of all time, but did you listen?

"I didn't dance. I wanted to make him lose his power. He punched like a sissy. I stayed on the ropes. Staying on the ropes is a beautiful thing for a fighter. You think when I'm on the ropes I'm doing bad."

Ali looked incredibly peeved in victory. He had told everyone how hard he had trained, how he had hit the heavy bag again and how Foreman was a "mummy." But no one wanted to bet on him, it seemed, and all the talk was about Foreman's awesome power.

"I am the greatest of all time and you thought a scared amateur would win," he said.

Foreman had nothing angry to say at all, and his voice was soft as he talked with reporters.

His sentiments tinkled while Ali's clanged.

"Nobody lost," Foreman said, pushing the facts a little. "We have built some real bridges here. When the competition is clean, there is never a loser. If there is a good fight, there's no loser."

Foreman even had some incredible praise for the man who ridiculed him. Of Ali, who rolled his eyes weirdly and mouthed a curse after the playing of the Star Spangled Banner, Foreman said, "He's a true American, a great gentleman and a champion."

Then he added, "If you don't have anything good to say about somebody, then you shouldn't say anything at all." Ali was absent from school the afternoon the teacher got around to that maxim.

On the punch that took him out, Foreman said it was the one he never saw. There were others that he got a pretty good look at, and they were the ones that did most of the damage.

Sitting in his yellow-colored dressing room, Ali hedged questions about retirement.

Missouri's waterfowl season open

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state's 20-day waterfowl hunting season opened at noon Wednesday with state conservation officials estimating a good crop of ducks and geese around the state.

Duck hunters will be on a point system with different values assigned to species and sexes of birds. Once a hunter goes over 100 points for the day, he will be finished.

The goose bag limits vary depending on the zone or area, while blue and snow geese limits will be five statewide. Any mixed bag of geese cannot exceed five.

Hunting for canvasbacks and redheads, which have had low populations for several years, will be closed from the Alton Dam on the Mississippi River north to the Iowa line. The birds will be worth 100 points elsewhere in the state.

Indefinite probation for Maryland-Eastern Shore

KANSAS CITY (AP)— Maryland-Eastern Shore has been prohibited from any postseason basketball competition or games televised by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for one year.

The sanction, announced by the NCAA here Tuesday, was the stiffest handed down as a number of schools were penalized for violating association rules concerning basketball.

Other actions were announced against DePaul of Chicago; Augustana College of Sioux Falls, S. D.; Gallaudet College of Washington, D. C.; the Ohio Valley Conference and eight of its members.

The NCAA said Maryland-Eastern Shore permitted several students to play basketball while they were ineligible and improperly allocated financial assistance to one athlete. In several cases, the association's Committee on Infractions said, financial aid was not administered through proper channels.

Two eligibility rules were violated by the school, the association said. One restricts an athlete's participation to five calendar years. Another deals with improper certification of eligibility.

An indefinite probation period was handed down against Maryland-Eastern Shore.

DePaul and Augustana were placed on probation for one year. Augustana, whose probation was effective Oct. 16, was cited for providing a basketball player transportation expenses and allowing him to receive financial aid before he established eligibility.

DePaul, with Oct. 10 the effective date of probation, improperly provided financial assistance and failed to determine an athletes eligibility, the NCAA said.

IRS stumbling block?

NFL talks over expansion plans

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials of the 26 National Football League teams gathered today to review their 1976 expansion plans for Seattle and Tampa along with such current franchise difficulties as inflation.

The NFL, which has set a price $16 million each for the new teams, was seeking potential owners not overly worried about the league's tax woes, labor unrest and the dip in attendence figures.

One of the key groups bidding for the Tampa franchise is headed by Harry T. Mangurian, a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., furniture and real estate executive. He is known for his thoroughbred racing activities.

At least two other groups — led by Jacksonville, Fla., lawyer Hugh Culverhouse and Philadelphia builder Tom McCloskey — were thought to be in the running for the Tampa franchise despite the high cost.

But in Seattle the dissolution of one group that had been bidding for the new NFL franchise was announced Tuesday.

Wayne Field, president of the Seattle Kings football club, relinquished its chances and suggested that the league consider the Seattle Professional Football Club, headed by Herman Sarkowsky.

It was unclear what expansion decisions the NFL would make, particularly in light of a major unresolved civil suit by the Internal Revenue Service. It could directly affect future plans.

In a case involving the Atlanta Falcons, the IRS is questioning the common sports practice of making tax depreciation claims on the purchase of athletes by expansion clubs from established teams.

The league owners still have to contend with unrest in the NFL Players Association, which has to negotiate a new contract following the strike that kept many veterans out of several preseason games.

NFL team payrolls already have jumped 25 per cent to a total of about $2.5 million, partially due to competition for talent with the new World Football League — plagued by its own financial problems.

More money problems

Chicago owner forces Davidson's resignation

CHICAGO (AP) — A power play by Chicago Fire owner Tom Origer left Gary Davidson ousted as commissioner of the World Football League, but the league itself afloat for at least the rest of this season.

At an emergency meeting here Tuesday, Davidson tendered his immediate resignation as czar of the circuit he founded in opposition to the venerable National Football League.

Donald J. Regan, WFL general counsel, was named league executive director in lieu of a commissioner, but for the time being the league obviously will be directed by its six-member executive committee.

Davidson will continue in WFL operations as a member of the executive committee, chairman of the expansion committee and part-owner and governor of the Southern California Sun franchise.

But his departure as commissioner was triggered by Origer's threat to drop out of the WFL immediately with three games still left to play.

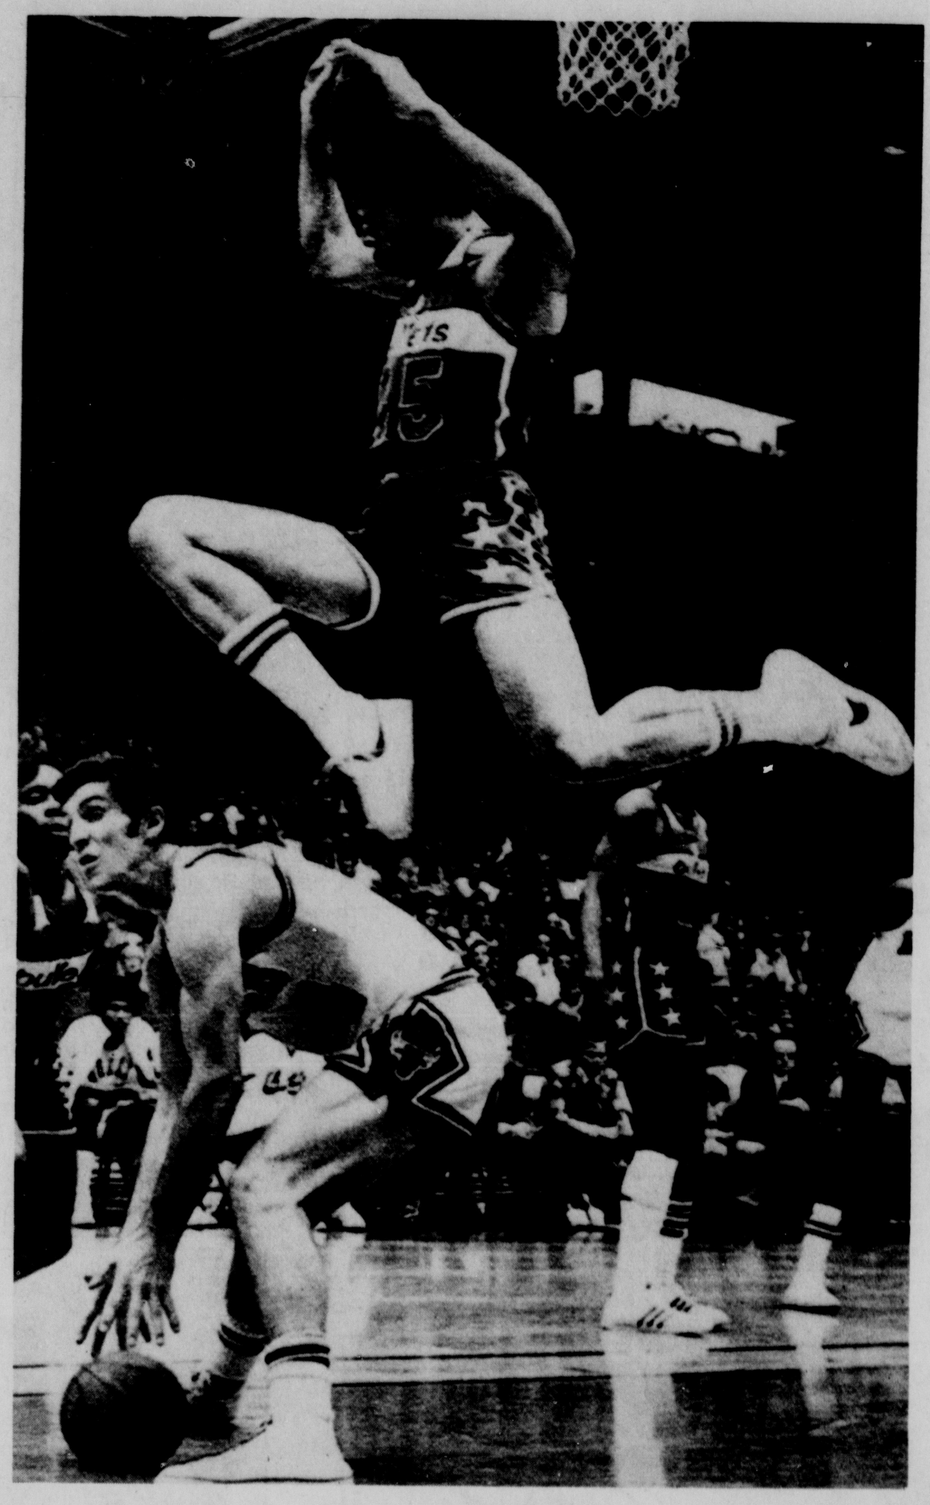

Origer earlier had tried unsuccessfully to strip Davidson from the commissioner's post, contending he spread the league's operation too thin financially with less than well-heeled franchise investors.

Reportedly Origer recently sent a letter to the league office stating he was dropping his franchise at once. This spurred Tuesday's meeting and announced "restructuring" of the league which already has seen the Detroit Wheels and Jacksonville Sharks throw in the sponge.

Additionally, financial woes caused the Houston Texans to move to Shreveport, La., and the New York Stars to Charlotte, N.C.

Origer declined comment on his withdrawal letter and, when asked if he thought he scored a victory in forcing Davidson's resignation, said "I got my point across."

John Bassett Jr., owner of the Memphis Southmen and chairman of the WFL's executive committee, said the reorganization guaranteed league operation.

Basketball ballet

Washington Bullets' Phil Chenier (45) seems to be trying out for Swan Lake during this third-quarter rebound attempt against the Chicago Bulls Tuesday night in Chicago. Bulls' Jerry Sloan (4) comes up with the ball, however. Washington dumped the Bulls, 96-80.

Wildcats' new look

Gibson to start Edwards against Missouri Tigers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Coach Vince Gibson, casting about for some offensive backfield punch, plans a new look for Kansas State's game Saturday against Missouri.

L. T. Edwards, a 5-foot-11, 196-pound sophomore, has replaced senior Dave Specht as the No. 1 tailback. James Couch, 6-2, 230-pounder from Scheetz, Tex., will be running at fullback for the second week.

The Wildcats, mauled in every way by Oklahoma last weekend, were especially hardhit with injuries to the defensive unit. Gibson has had to make major adjustments in his linebacking corps, including dipping into his freshmen roster. He brought up Gary Spani, who will be working at weakside linebacker.

Starting offensive guard Jack Thomas is back in the Iowa State lineup as the Cyclones continue preparations for their date Saturday with Oklahoma. "Oklahoma is an outstanding team, but I'm just as concerned with how we react to the challenge," said Coach Earl Bruce.

Kansas has a much-improved roster going into the Oklahoma State game at the Cowboys' place. Coach Don Fambrough also detects the presence of something "we haven't had in the last two games --a good state of mind." The Jayhawks were throttled in the last two weeks by Nebraska and Iowa State. Against OSU, they should have quarterback Scott McMichael. He left the Iowa State game in the second quarter last week with a bruised wrist. Also, defensive end Les Barnes and defensive tackle Terry Beeson, who had been hobbled by bruised knees, were back to nearly full strength Tuesday.

Nebraska's Cornhuskers must feel they are preparing for a game against themselves as they look to the upcoming contest against Colorado. "Colorado is very similar to us both offensively and defensively. They just emphasize some things we don't," said Coach Tom Osborne.

The Buffalo run from the I-formation like Nebraska and operate from a five-two set defensively much like the Huskers do.

Auburn, Penn St. picked to lose in college upsets

NEW YORK (AP) — Ohio State and Oklahoma have been offensive to their 13 football opponents this season and more of the same may be in store this weekend.

"We made all 10 of our offensive goals," Ohio State's Woody Hayes said following last week's 55-7 rout of Northwestern. "That's the only time we've ever done that. And our consistency went from 73 to 88 per cent."

This week's beleaguered defense belongs to Illinois ... which will absorb a 35-14 licking.

Meanwhile, Oklahoma's Barry Switzer says the Sooners are "the best college football team I've ever been around. And we'll be close to this team again offensively next year."

Iowa State gave Oklahoma its closest call in Big Eight play last season, losing by "only" 34-17. This year, 42-7 has a better ring to it.

Last week's score was 49 right, 17 wrong for a .742 percentage. One of the four Upset Specials — Georgia Tech over Tulane — came through while Princeton over Penn missed by a couple of points. The season tally shows 328 right, 125 wrong and 12 ties for .724.

Upset Special of the Week ... Florida 17, Auburn 14: Tigers' defense is something else, except against the Wishbone.

Second Upset Special ... Maryland 23, Penn State 21: Maryland's defense isn't the best cure for offensive blahs.

Third Upset Special ... Washington 24, UCLA 20: Bruins not the same without John Sciarra.

Michigan 48, Indiana 9: Ohio State beat Indiana 49-9 and Michigan's ranked lower in The Associated Press poll.

Alabama 28, Mississippi State 7: The Bear just loves to give his former assistants their comeuppance.

Southern California 34, California 21: Trojans smell the roses along the way ... with Anthony, not Mac, Davis.

Notre Dame 49, Navy 0: The last time they met in Philadelphia, Notre Dame returned the opening kickoff for a touchdown.

Texas A&M 21, Arkansas 14: Aggies play Southern Methodist in the Cotton Bowl next week.

Nebraska 28, Colorado 14: It wasn't like this in the Mid-American Conference for CU's Bill Mallory.

Texas 24, Southern Methodist 12: That's what happens when a Longhorn meets a Mustang.

Arizona State 48, Texas-El Paso 7: Sun Devils whack Miners en route to another WAC title.

Miami, Ohio 35, Western Michigan 0: MAC, not WAC.

Temple 21, Cincinnati 20: This almost became the fourth Upset Special.

Wisconsin 24, Michigan State 17: Badgers avenge last year's licking.

Yale 27, Dartmouth 7: The old order changeth in the Ivy League.

Harvard 29, Penn 28: Dee-fense, dee-fense ... where are you?

Georgia 28, Houston 24: Cougars' troubles are a mystery.

Tulane 14, Kentucky 10: Green Wave regroups behind Terry Looney.

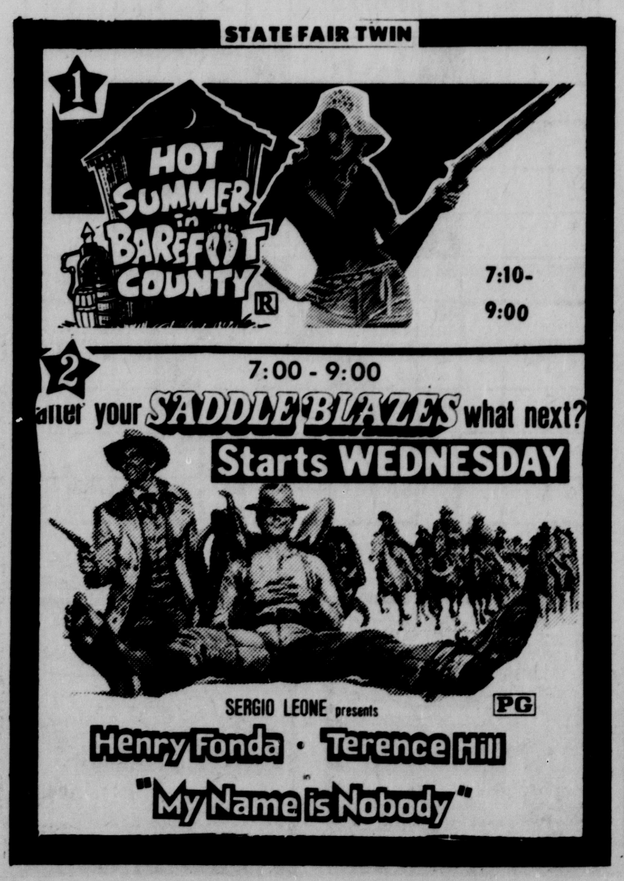

S-C takes on Osage in semis

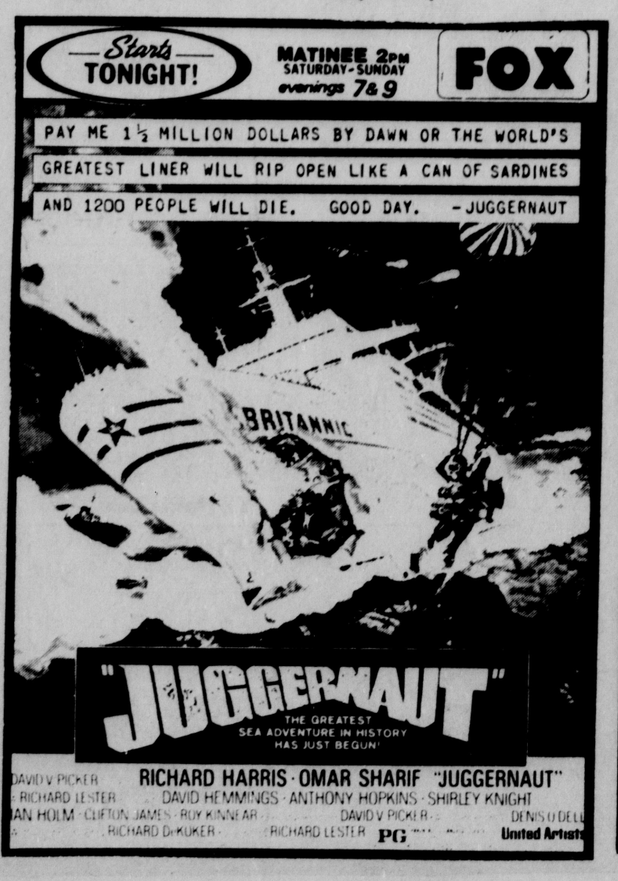

VERSAILLES — Second-seeded Sedalia Smith-Cotton will take on School of the Osage, which upset third-seeded Columbia Hickman here last night, in a 7 p.m. semifinal game of the Missouri State High School Activities Association's girls district volleyball tournament.

In the other semifinal game, set for 8 p.m., host and first-seeded Versailles will face California, which downed fourth-seeded Columbia Rock Bridge in last night's other quarterfinal match.

Osage allowed Hickman only one point in winning its game in straight sets, 15-1, 15-0. California defeated Rock Bridge in straight sets, 15-12, 15-3.

KC Scouts trade Evans back to St. Louis Blues

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Chris Evans has been traded to the St. Louis Blues—again.

The Blues acquired the veteran forward-defenseman Tuesday in a National Hockey League transaction that sent defenseman Larry Giroux to the Kansas City Scouts.

The Blues also picked up the Scouts' fourth-round draft choice in either 1975 or 1976.

"We plan to use Chris to help us kill penalties," said Blues' Coach Lou Angotti. "That's one of the primary reasons we got him. He's always done a pretty good job for us in that position in the past."

The trade marks the third time Evans has joined the Blues. He originally came to St. Louis in the inter-league draft in 1970, but was taken the next day by Buffalo in the expansion draft.

Otterville cage teams stay alive

JAMESTOWN — Otterville downed Prairie Home in the losers bracket of the Jamestown Tournament here Tuesday night in girls basketball, 29-25.

Rene Watring was the leading scorer for Otterville with 12 points. Sharon Baker netted 14 for Prairie Home.

In junior high school consolation round boys action, Otterville dumped host Jamestown, 56-26, behind the 18-point performance of Mark Cole.

Russell Johnson led Jamestown with 10 points.

Wrestling results

Opening — Lord Alfred Hayes won over Bobby Whitlock in a one-fall match.

Added attraction — Ted Oates defeated Bob Brady in a one-fall event.

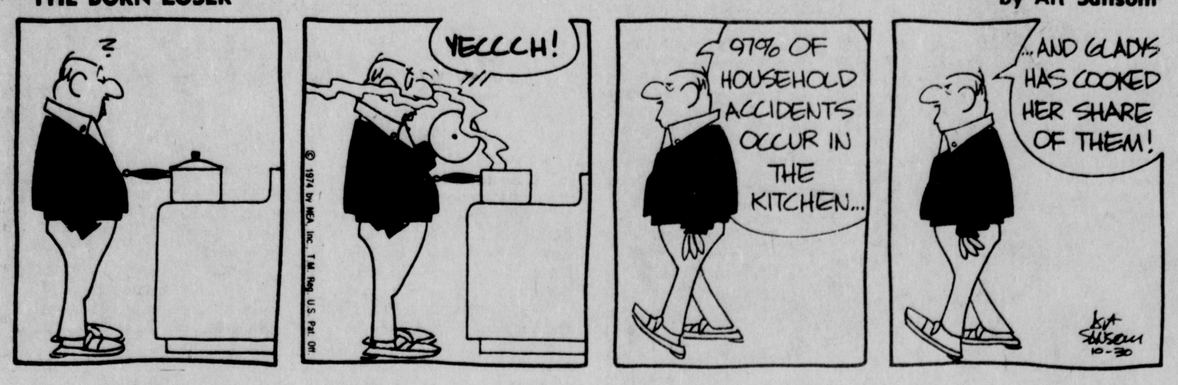

Special — In the third one-fall match of the night, Mike George defeated Bobby Jaggers.

Semifinal — Jerry Oates pinned Bob Brown in the last one-fall event.

Main event — Ted Oates pocketed the $1,000 top prize in an eight-man battle royal.

Opening lead—K♠

By Oswald & James Jacoby

South could have picked up an easy 500 points by just doubling three diamonds, but he liked to play notrump and bid the game.

West opened the king of spades and led a diamond at trick two. East led back a diamond and South was on lead. He could see eight easy tricks. His problem was to score a ninth with either the jack of hearts or the queen of spades.

He started proceedings by cashing the ace, king and jack of clubs. West, who had discarded a spade on the second diamond, let another spade go on the jack of clubs. Now South had a perfect count. West had been dealt six spades, four hearts, one diamond and two clubs.

He also had a sure thing irrespective of the location of the queen of hearts. He simply cashed his last diamond; led a heart to dummy's ace and discarded a spade on the queen of clubs. He was left with the king and one heart and the queen and one spade in his hand.

West chucked a heart to hang on to the ace-jack of spades and South led a heart to his king. If West held the heart queen he would have been endplayed. As it was, South dropped East's queen and made an overtrick.

What do you do now?

A—Bid six notrump. Even if your partner is showing two aces you don't want to be in seven. He has bid like a man with a minimum.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding two notrump he has bid three diamonds over your two spades. What do you do now?

Firefighters donation

Muting of racial issues a first in North Carolina

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Neither candidate seeking the seat of retiring U.S. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., is willing to endorse a proposed constitutional amendment to ban school busing for racial balance.

The muted nature of racial issues and an overriding concern for balancing the federal budget have been the hallmarks of the campaign between Democrat Robert Morgan and Republican William E. Stevens.

Both men are courting the black vote while trying to avoid alienating conservative white voters. They have made this campaign the first in recent North Carolina history where race has not been a major issue.

Morgan, 49, has been on the other side of the fence. During the 1960s, he managed the segregationist gubernatorial campaigns of I. Beverly Lake.

But starting in 1968, when he has elected attorney general, he modified his position on the race issue. His appeal to black voters during the current campaign has gone far enough to cost him the support of Lake, now a justice on the state Supreme Court.

Stevens, 52, is a furniture executive whose previous experience includes an unsuccessful campaign for Congress and a single term in the state legislature.

He secured the support of Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser, and the GOP nomination, only after better-known Republicans decided not to run earlier in the year.

Stevens has been fighting an uphill battle to overcome his own obscurity and continue the gains made by the Republicans in 1972, when they took the governor's office and a seat in the Senate for the first time.

Morgan started the campaign with one obvious advantage. After two successful campaigns for attorney general, he was well known in a state where three-fourths of the voters are registered Democrats.

As the front-runner, he has ignored Stevens and refused to debate or answer the charges and attacks against him.

Stevens' campaign has been bolstered recently by visits from President Ford and California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

His hopes lie in a small voter turnout in conservative, rural Democratic areas favorable to Morgan and a disciplined GOP vote in the more populous areas of the central Piedmont.

Both men have tried to outdo each other in determination to cut federal spending and balance the budget. Both say deficit spending is the major factor in inflation.

Stevens has, somewhat reluctantly, endorsed President Ford's inflation package. Morgan has criticized the surtax proposal and called instead for legislation closing tax loopholes available to big business and the wealthy.

On foreign policy issues, Morgan identifies closely with Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., while Stevens favors the detente approach of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. But those issues have been lost in the concentration on inflation.

Possible price-fixing on foods is under probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is investigating possible illegal price-fixing of foods, one of the crucial areas in the nation's surging inflation.

Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe, elaborating on the Ford administration's recent push for stepped-up antitrust enforcement, said Tuesday, "A far greater number of possible antitrust violations involving foods are under active investigation by the Antitrust Division."

Saxbe, in a speech to the legal committee of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, noted that the department has 14 civil and criminal cases pending against food producers. These cases involve, among other things, broiler chickens, dairy products and baked goods.

"We are determined to relentlessly run to earth any allegation involving possible violation of antitrust laws. We are giving considerable emphasis to the food industry," Saxbe said.

He said the department is stepping up price-fixing investigations to help combat inflation.

Administration officials, citing inflation, have called for tougher prison sentences for businessmen who violate antitrust laws by conspiring secretly to fix prices at artificially high levels.

The attorney general cited possible antitrust violations involving the sugar, egg and beef industries nationally and of companies marketing bread, milk, seafood, tuna, beer and soft drinks regionally or locally.

Wamble is professor of church history at Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Kansas City.

Says bail authority not Bond's

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The governor of Missouri has no authority to guarantee that bail bond will be furnished to persons extradited to Missouri from another state to face criminal prosecutions.

Hugh Sprague, legal advisor to Gov. Christopher S. Bond, said Tuesday any such agreement made by the governor in the case of Dr. Norman Garrison Jr. of Corinth, Miss., would not be binding.

Mississippi Gov. Bill Waller, in response to Bond's request that Garrison be brought back to Missouri to face trial in connection with the slaying of his former wife, said he would not extradite the physician unless Bond guarantee that bailbond would be furnished.

Sprague said, however, that such an agreement would have to be reached with officials in Dunklin county in southeast Missouri, where Lee Ann Garrison was found shot to death this summer.

AMERICA'S AUTOMOTIVE ACTION TEAM

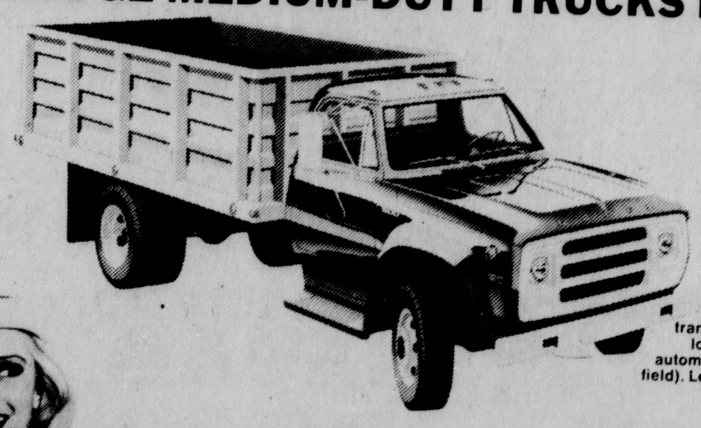

WHO'S GOT THE ACTION IN '75?

DODGE TRADESMAN VAN '75.

Do you have plans for a van? Fancy wheels, portholes, special paint job, paneled interior—or a strong, no-nonsense on-the-job working partner? We have the action you want in vans: Dodge Tradesman! On the job or "on the town," we think you'll agree—we Dodge Boys have the toughest, sharpest, hardest workin' van anywhere. Check us today!

DODGE MEDIUM-DUTY TRUCKS FOR 1975.

Dodge is still the only "medium" with solid-state Electronic Ignition! For '75, you'll find hard-working trucks designed for ease of serviceability. And you can choose from a D600, D700, or D800 model this year. All have a choice of a single- or two-speed rear axle, and a four-speed or five-speed transmission (including the lowest priced four-speed automatic in the medium-duty field). Let's talk about your next truck soon!

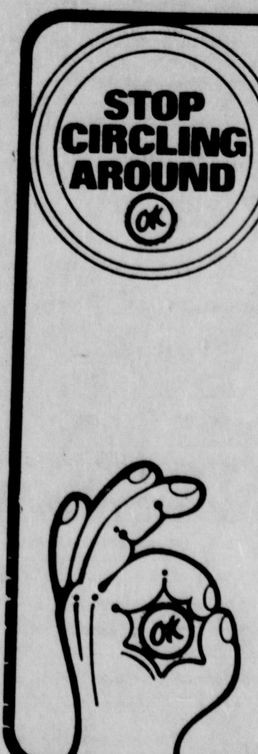

See my Dodge ACTION TEAM!
(Tell 'em Casey sent ya!)

OUR DIAMONDS ARE A CUT ABOVE THE REST

Buying a diamond is an investment in beauty for a special person. It is an investment in individuality for no two diamonds are alike. It is an investment in the future because a diamond is forever.

We guarantee that each of our diamonds are of brilliant whiteness, precise cutting proportions, and gem purity. Experts in our diamond cutting centers throughout the world carefully examine each stone five separate times under magnification ten times its original size. Each diamond must exceed our exacting standards for fine color, cut and purity and also possess maximum radiance and real value.

LIFETIME GUARANTEE

We guarantee our diamonds to be exactly as represented. If for any reason you are not completely satisfied, you may return your diamond within 60 days and your money will be refunded. This guarantee includes free cleaning and inspection of your diamond fo life. This diamond will be accepted at its full purchase price less taxes, on a larger diamond of equal selling price.

OUR GUARANTEE

Every item pictured in our catalog is a true representation of the actual product being offered for sale. We further guarantee that the manufacturer or supplier will perform to the full extent of his stated guarentee or warrenty-or we will, at our option, repair or replace the item.
